F.D.R.'S LEAGUE PLAN RECALLS WILSON FAILURE

9 Power Pact Also of No Avail.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 12.—As the allied nations approach another attempt to create a world agency that will preserve peace the spotlight is being turned upon the reasons for the failure of Woodrow Wilson's league of nations.

Mr. Roosevelt and his fellow internationalists generally place the blame for the failure of the league to avert the current world war upon the refusal of the United States senate to join the league without reservation of its sovereignty. The President appeals to the country to erase what he regards as this blot on its escutcheon by joining the new league of nations planned at Dumbarton Oaks which is to be consummated at the San Francisco conference next month.

Balked Over Sovereignty.

The nationalists point out that the senate was willing to take the country into the Wilson league without article X. of the covenant requiring the nation to go to war to maintain the territorial integrity of European nations, but that Mr. Wilson kept us out of the league by refusing to accept any reservations. The Dumbarton Oaks plan contains no article X., so that Mr. Roosevelt is proposing a league essentially that of 1919 with the reservations Mr. Wilson rejected.

Furthermore the nationalists point out that the failure of the league to curb Italian aggression on Ethiopia and German aggression beginning with Hitler's reoccupation of the Rhineland was due to British and French power politics. The outstanding reason was Britain's desire to build up a strong Germany against Russian bolshevism and to check the rise of French hegemony in Europe. But for these motives of national interest Britain and France could have checked German and Italian aggression at any time, despite the nonmembership of the United States in the league.

As it happened, however, Mr. Roosevelt attempted to coöperate with the league against Italy until he found himself out on a limb by virtue of British refusal to impose sanctions.

Hoover Coöperated.

For similar reasons, the league failed to check Japan's aggression on China in the thirties, which led to the war in the Pacific, altho President Hoover was coöperating with the league in an effort to enforce the nine power treaty.

The nine power pact grew out of the Washington conference on the limitation of naval armaments called by President Harding in 1921. England, at the time, was profoundly embarrassed by the agitation in the British dominions, notably Australia and Canada, against the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance. Prime Minister Lloyd George saw in the Harding move a God-given opportunity to replace the alliance with a generalized security pact in which not only Britain and Japan but other nations with far eastern interests would join. He therefore induced Mr. Harding to include in

Kelly Makes Traction Plea in Legislature

BY GEORGE TAGGE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., March 13.—Mayor Kelly today made a personal plea to the Illinois senate in behalf of legislation to straighten out Chicago's ancient traction muddle. Gov. Green's appeal along the same lines was delivered by State Revenue Director Collins.

Efforts apparently were being made to put all the cards on the table. Senate study of the measure will be continued tomorrow morning and in the afternoon Kelly and traction experts will appear before the house committee on public utilities.

"We have no ax to grind whatever," Kelly said, recalling how he joined Gov. Green in an attack upon the problem. "There is nothing hidden in these bills. Everything is on the surface.

Asks Support of All.

"We're asking support of senators from all over the state. We believe it would be a great thing for Chicago. We in Chicago would like to know whether the state is going thru on this or not, so we can go our own way if necessary."

No increase in fares is contemplated in the plans for merging the Chicago street car and elevated lines under a seven man board appointed by Kelly and Green, according to Philip Harrington, Chicago subway commissioner, who helped state Chicago's case.

"Assuming present price and wage levels, our calculations were based upon the present rates of fare," Harrington said. "If there is inflation private companies will be in the same boat as the proposed public traction authority."

Seek Prompt Action.

Passage of the bills with an emergency clause was asked to permit submission of the plan to Chicago voters at the June 4 judicial election. Suburbs, Kelly said, could come in or stay out of the setup, as the voters decide.

Sen. Miller [R., Hillsboro] asked the most questions. He said that even if Evanston, for example, wants to stay out of the setup, its elevated then would be controled by the metropolitan traction authority. Fares from Evanston to Chicago might be raised, he said.

"In that respect, powers of the authority would be no different than those of the Illinois commerce commission are now," Harrington said.

"After all, the success or failure of this entire enterprise will depend on the caliber of the board members. They certainly will have

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., March 13.—Chicago's Mayor Kelly stood at the side of Gov. Green tonight and asked that political and sectional differences be forgotten so that all public officials can unite behind "whatever is good for the state of Illinois and the city of Chicago."

Kelly and Green, heads of rival political organizations, were chief speakers at the legislature's biennial St. Patrick's day dinner. Addressing himself to the Republicans from downstate, Kelly said:

"I want you to like me and I want our fellows to like the governor—in everything but politics. We want to coöperate for good government and we ask the same for you," Kelly continued. "If we do that, we are acting as real patriotic Americans in time of war.

"I don't care how much credit goes to Gov. Green for anything that is right and good. We are all for one and all for the other, and we are going to work together for the good of the state and the city."

Decorum was strictly observed. Rep. Quinn [D., Chicago], who acted as toastmaster, admitted it would be good advertising for the traction bill, but he refused to ask the governor and the mayor to join in singing the "Trolley Song."

WHAT ARE WE FIGHTING FOR?

GUNNER FINDS HE'S ALONE IN A PLANE FLYING BY ITSELF

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 13.—When flak ripped into their Flying Fortress over a German railway yard, setting the wing on fire, and the pilot advised the crew to prepare to bail out, Staff Sgt. Charles Sibrey Jr. of Odon, Ind., 25 miles west of Bedford, stuck by his tail turret guns because he expected enemy fighters would attack the damaged craft.

However, when an hour passed and the 19 year old Hoosier had heard nothing from the other crewmen after he reported flak bursts close to the bomber he found to his horror he was the only occupant of the plane, which had managed to fly on an even keel for 150 miles after the rest of the crew had parachuted into Germany.

While the bomber continued to maintain the smooth course it had followed from inside Germany to the front lines, Sibray parachuted safely into France.

Fresh Food Sent Daily to Yanks Along Rhine

PARIS, March 13 (AP).—American troops fighting on the Rhine receive daily supplies of fresh meat and dairy products which are rushed to them by army refrigerator trucks. The trucks operated by the army transportation corps from a cold storage plant in Antwerp, deliver their cargoes at the Rhine within eight hours.

A Marine Dies, a Sailor Lives! 2 Stories of Love and Courage

Captain Loses Son

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—A small navy boat, in which lay a young marine sergeant desperately wounded on Iwo, drew up to a transport lying off that Pacific island.

He was to have been taken aboard the transport, but another small boat came up, carrying a navy captain who asked that the sergeant be given into his care. The marine was passed gently over.

And thus, Capt. Charles Carter Anderson, U. S. N., carried his only son, Sgt. Charles Carter Anderson Jr., to his own ship anchored nearby.

Both Legs Gone.

Sgt. Anderson was dying. He had lost both legs and an arm and had suffered other wounds from the explosion of a mortar shell or a land mine on Iwo.

"I'm feeling pretty good," he told his father. "I wonder how mother will take all this."

Those were his last words.

"Is it my husband or my son?" she asked.

With Us No More.

Mrs. Anderson turned to two unopened letters from her husband. She had been saving them to read after she had dressed for her volunteer job at Bethesda naval hospital.

"A force stronger than ours has taken charge and our beloved son is with us on earth no more," one letter said.

Mrs. Anderson donned her uniform and went to her work at the hospital.

This story of a fighting family was pieced together today from a delayed dispatch of Coast Guard Correspondent Thomas Warren, Capt. Anderson's letters, and Mrs. Anderson's account.

Brothers Together

John is 26, Norman is 17. John came from Smithfield, O., and Norman lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Worstell, in Dillonville, 30 miles away.

They entered the navy the same day, shipped together, and survived two sinkings together.

Then on Jan. 8, the navy related today, the two were aboard their new ship off Luzon. John was manning a 20 millimeter gun and Norman stood near-by at his gun.

Bombed by Jap Plane.

The ship was throwing all it had at the Japs ashore. Then it happened—a Japanese dive bomber loosed a bomb. Norman, now in a Southwest Pacific naval hospital, recalled:

"It didn't look so good. The bomb exploded. I couldn't see anything but I felt myself flying."

He was blown 100 feet away into the water. When he came to the surface, John was 50 feet away. Neither was hurt.

Forty-five minutes later a minesweeper picked them up. Then the larger minesweeper Hovey—later announced as sunk—came alongside to take off survivors.

Norman slipped as he stepped from one deck to the other. His foot was smashed between the rolling ships. John caught him up and carried him onto the Hovey.

Tosses Him Into Water.

Next day before dawn, an enemy torpedo plane attacked and scored a hit. John carried his crippled brother to the rail, tossed him into the water and dived in after him.

It was dark. John swam with one hand and with his other buoyed up his brother.

They were picked up by a small boat a short time later.

JAPS PRACTICE MANEUVERS TO STOP INVADER

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Spurred by warnings from Premier Koiso and military ministers that a homeland invasion is imminent, the Japanese army devoted three days to anti-landing rehearsals, Tokyo broadcasts disclosed yesterday.

SOVIET TROOPS 33 MILES FROM REICH CAPITAL

3 Groups Claw at German Defense.

LONDON, March 14 [Wednesday] (AP).—Marshal Zhukov, achieving a break-thru in a frontal assault toward Berlin, has pushed nearly 100,000 Russian troops across the Oder river between Frankfurt and newly captured Kuestrin and has sent spearheads within 33 miles of the reich capital, the Germans said last night.

The German DNB agency contended the break-thru was only temporary, but said nine Russian divisions now were fighting on the west side of the river on the 16 mile wide Kuestrin-Frankfurt front.

While the broadcast soviet bulletin made no mention of any crossings in that critical area, Moscow dispatches told of preparatory artillery fire by heavy Russian guns. Reports from the Russian capital indicated that three Russian armies were expected to make the massive assault on Berlin.

Three Areas Involved.

According to the Germans, Russian task forces are attempting to force open the forefield defenses of Berlin in these three areas:

In the Lebus bridgehead, six miles north of Frankfurt.

The Russians' break-thru was secured in the Lebus bridgehead area, a Nazi commentator said, adding that fighting on the high ground commanding the Frankfurt-Berlin highway was heavy and fluctuating.

Gain in Stettin Suburbs.

Sixty miles north of captured Kuestrin, Zhukov's armored and storm units steadily whittled down German positions east of the Oder in Stettin's eastern suburbs of Altdamm, Finkenwalde, and Padjuch. The Germans claimed that Nazi counter-attacks had thrown the Russians back near Greifenhagen, 11 miles south of Stettin.

Northwest of Gdynia the Russians cleaned out a 14 mile coastal area from the road junction of Rheda, four miles east of Wejherowo [Neustadt], northward to Chlapau, Moscow announced. Advances up to five miles were scored by the Russians in this operation, but no new gains were reported in the frontal drive on Gdynia which already has carried to within eight miles of that Polish Baltic port.

The Germans reported that a two pronged Russian offensive in the south toward Moravska-Ostrava, Czechoslovakia's third largest city, had "breached the first German line." Moravska-Ostrava guards the Moravian gap on the ancient invasion road to Vienna and Prague.

OSAKA HUGE PIT OF FIRE AFTER SUPER FORT RAID

21ST BOMBER COMMAND HDQ., Guam, March 14 [Wednesday]—(AP).—Osaka, factory congested second city of Japan, was transformed into "a huge pit of fire" by more than 2,000 tons of incendiaries dropped today by a force of probably 300 B-29s.

The first Super Fortress pilots back from Osaka, which was given the same devastating treatment accorded Tokyo on Saturday and Nagoya on Monday, reported four square miles of the city was a solid sheet of fire.

Their reports covered only the first three-quarters of an hour.

Lt. Joseph R. Carroll of Jacksonville, Fla., flying in the Lady Luck, said that seven minutes after his wave struck "the whole town seemed to be burning like a huge pit of fire."

Corp. Richard A. Steelman of Alton, Ill., and Sgt. Roy H. Brom of Dodge, Wis., also told of seeing many fires in the city.

Set 19 Big Fires.

The first 25 B-29s over the city set at least 19 big fires. Japanese defense was called erratic and incomplete reports mentioned no losses of Super Forts.

"They didn't shoot at us much," said Capt. R. T. Eakes of Philadelphia, Miss. "They acted just as if they had gotten out of bed, run to their guns, and started shooting wildly."

The raid, like the big ones at Nagoya and Tokyo, was made in the early morning darkness.

The raiders were favored by a surface wind which spread the flames.

Raid Lasts Three Hours.

Tokyo radio, saying the raid lasted three hours, acknowledged that some fires still were burning many hours after the raiders left. [An American network broadcast from Guam said some fires also still are burning in Tokyo and Nagoya.]

Meanwhile, further reconnaissance photographs added 13,000,000 square feet to the total wiped out Monday at Nagoya. That made 47,600,000 square feet in all, or about 1,000 acres—roughly two square miles. The Tokyo raiders spread fires over 16 square miles.

The Osaka target area included an estimated 15,000 small family type factories in addition to factories turning out iron, steel, and aluminum products, airplane propellers, machine tools, and bearings. Osaka had a population of 3,250,000 in 1940 and once was Japan's leading industrial city. Ninety per cent of the city's buildings are of wood and plaster.

Third Largest Port.

Osaka is Japan's third largest port, situated on Osaka bay at the eastern entrance to Nippon's inland sea. The city is 12 miles long from north to south and as much as seven miles wide. A criss-cross pattern of rivers and canals serves as firebreaks. The city has some government and office buildings eight stories high but generally it has a low, flat profile.

ENEMY RAIDS BRIDGEHEAD AS YANKS PUSH ON

PARIS, March 14 [Wednesday]—(AP).—The Germans attacked the Americans' Remagen-Erpel bridgehead with at least 60 planes yesterday and fought stubbornly in the hills east of the Rhine river. But Lt. Gen. Hodges' United States 1st army troops pushed relentlessly deeper and reached within two miles of the great six lane super-highway linking Frankfurt-on-Main and the industrial Ruhr.

Gains made by American infantry were measured in yards, but the advances gave the doughboys control of important heights controling the bridgehead, which was now being speedily built up with the help of a newly erected pontoon bridge.

The bridgehead, into which the Germans said five to six divisions of American troops already had been poured, now was about five miles deep and perhaps 12 miles long. The German radio said Americans had crossed the Rhine in assault boats to extend the bridgehead into Koenigswinter on the north, two miles beyond Honnef.

Skies Filled With Dog Fights.

Thruout the day the skies were filled with dogfights as the enemy made frequent raids and fighters of the 9th air force labored to keep them away from the bridgehead area. Half a dozen or more lightning fast, jet propelled planes were among the enemy attackers in the Germans' strongest air effort since the Rhine crossing on March 7.

American planes shot down 10, claimed five probables, and damaged six while losing four of their own. Anti-aircraft gunners destroyed others, but no tabulation of their score was yet available. Monday, when the German raids were lighter, ack-ack batteries shot down 19 enemy planes.

A field dispatch disclosed that 1st army engineers had succeeded in throwing a temporary bridge across the wide, swift river to share the burden with the shell scarred rail structure captured in dramatic fashion last Wednesday.

Repel Counter-Attacks.

The Germans made numerous small counter-attacks, all of which were repelled.

Berlin broadcasts asserted that 70,000 American troops had been jammed into the bridgehead and were waging a "ferocious" battle with tremendous air support in an effort to break out of the Westerwald mountains and plunge on toward Berlin.

One Nazi commentator said American assault troops had crossed the Rhine in boats down river from Remagen and had expanded the bridgehead to the north.

Bridgehead forces pressing southward, he said, "penetrated into Hoenningen but were thrown back." Hoenningen is six miles southeast of Remagen, on the east bank of the Rhine.

Patton Gains 2½ Miles.

Lt. Gen. Patton's United States 3d army on the right reduced German holdings north of the Moselle river to a salient four miles wide by four deep, and between them the two mighty American forces virtually completed mopping up the Germans encircled in the Eifel mountains west of the Rhine, running their combined prisoner bag for the last eight days to 32,365 men.

The total prisoner haul of all allied armies since the Ardennes collapse was estimated at 135,000, equal to about 20 divisions.

The 3d army lashed out in a new attack on a nine mile front in the Saarburg area and advanced up to 2½ miles.

Hodges' Remagen bridgehead already has diverted German strength that otherwise would have been held in reserve to help protect the great Ruhr factory areas which begin 23 miles to the north.

Tribune Is First on Mindanao

BY WALTER SIMMONS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ZAMBOANGA, Mindanao, P. I., March 11 [Delayed].—A special edition of the Overseas Tribune was distributed here today, just one day after the Zamboanga landing.

The newspaper was printed aboard ship on captured Japanese paper brought from Luzon especially for the occasion. Actual publication took place on J-day, as the landing date was designated in army parlance.

Printed from Negatives.

The Mindanao edition of the Overseas Tribune marked the first use in the Pacific of multilith negatives. By the use of this process it is hoped the weekly newspaper specially produced for service men may gain still wider distribution. Sets of negatives, each full page size, are mailed weekly by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE together with plastic plates from which the regular Manila edition is printed by the more familiar letter press process. The negatives will be made available gratis to army and navy units which desire them and possess facilities for their use.

Get Up to Date News.

Sailors and fighters ashore both shared in the Mindanao edition, which brought them up to date on the news as of Feb. 24. Newspapers of such recent date are unheard of in the far reaches of the Pacific—or Luzon a few days ago the Red Cross was distributing newly arrived issues of a national magazine dated Nov. 11.

As soon as communications facilities are established, copies of the Overseas Tribune will be flown to Mindanao regularly from Manila, which is the central publication point for the Philippines area.

The Overseas Tribune was the first newspaper to be published on Leyte last year and more recently was the first American publication both on Luzon and in Manila after the entry of Gen. MacArthur's liberation forces.

fied as one of the units facing Hodges' men in the rough terrain east of the Rhine, but the enemy is not believed to have more than 50 tanks and self-propelled guns in the entire bridgehead area.

As a result of this shortage of armor the Nazis have been using artillery as a principal method of resistance against the eastward surge and now have wheeled up heavy guns of 240 millimeters [9½ inches] to throw shells into American positions.

What counter-attacks the enemy has mounted in the past several days have been only in company strength and with little supporting armor—designed more to keep the Yanks from enlarging their foothold than with any idea of wiping it out.

A front dispatch said that doughboys had captured a hill just north of Hoenningen. The Germans were said to be putting up their hardest fight on the northern end of the bridgehead, at the nearest approach to the Ruhr.

Say Von Rundstedt Out.

Border reports reaching Switzerland reported that Field Marshal Von Rundstedt again had been fired as supreme German commander in the west, and it perhaps was significant that the German radio began featuring Field Marshal Walther von Model in its broadcasts.

While allied correspondents still were operating under a news dimout in order to give the enemy as little information as possible, Berlin commentators described the fighting in considerable detail. One said:

"The Americans shifted their offensive focal point into the northern sector of the bridgehead, launching strong tank-supported attacks from the Honnef area against German high positions. Despite heavy losses, the Americans attacked repeatedly and hand-to-hand fighting ensued at several places.

3d Army Opens Attack.

"The Amercans finally were held due northeast and north of Honnef. Other American break-out attempts east and south from Linz were held after initial gains."

Lt. Gen. Patton's new thrust, spearheaded by the 94th infantry division, was made on the 3d army's right flank against the only sizable salient still held by the Germans west of the Rhine. This drive extended from a point eight miles northeast of Saarburg to about six southeast. Resistance was said to be light to moderate.

Altho the scope of this attack was not immediately defined, it is the first to be made on a divisional scale against what now is the only enemy salient west of the Rhine—a holding bounded roughly by the Moselle on the north, the Saar river on the west, and the border between Germany and Alsace Lorraine on the south.

A concerted drive against this area from the north, west, and south would serve a twofold purpose: First to threaten Germany's Saar basin and second to provide a diversionary attack to lighten the task of allied forces involved in future crossings of the Rhine.

Clear Eight More Towns.

On Patton's left flank 3d army troops north of the Moselle river cleared eight more towns as they compressed the enemy there to a pocket four miles square.

The 3d army processed a record number of 6,446 Germans captured during the day, exceeding its previous high of 4,992 set Aug. 10, 1944. Together the 1st and 3d armies have taken approximately 40,000 prisoners in eight days.

A field dispatch said German forces holding the east bank of the Rhine from Duisburg northward to the Dutch border were showing signs of extreme nervousness and that considerable enemy movement had been observed in Holland, a possible regrouping maneuver to meet an expected attack by the British 2d army.

Capt. Sertorius, German military commentator, said allied forces were prepared for an "imminent" attempt to cross the Rhine at points all the way from Bonn to Emmerich near the Dutch border.

Get Tactical Air Support.

From the headquarters of Field Marshal Montgomery came an announcement that the final prisoner count for the Rhine operations of the United States 9th and Canadian 1st armies was 50,477 and that American forces in the 21st army group have taken 46,303 prisoners since the Germans' Ardennes breakthru.

Weather improved during the day and tactical air forces flew 2,750 sorties, downing 22 German planes at a loss of four medium bombers and 13 fighters.

More than 150 Marauders and Havocs of the 9th air force bombed an air field near Frankfurt from which German planes were believed to be operating against the Remagen bridgehead.

U. S. Tells Europe It Must Redeem Invasion Money

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—"Invasion currency" carried into European countries by the United States army is strictly part of the money of those countries and they have the sole responsibility of redeeming it.

The treasury made this clear today in the most comprehensive statement yet issued about invasion currency.

Many economists have wondered about the ultimate redemption of the Italian lire, French francs, German marks, and other money—much of it printed in America—which allied forces are using for payment of troops and other purposes. The treasury explained:

The United States government did not issue any of these currencies. They are issued by authority of the lawful goverments involved. This is true even of the German currency, for under international law the military commander of conquered districts is the lawful government.

Deny Any Obligation.

"It is perfectly clear that the United States has not obligated itself in any way to 'redeem' any invasion currency issued in a foreign land, and we have no 'secret understandings' that we will ever do so."

In the case of France, Belgium, and the Netherlands, the United States is paying dollars to those governments in exchange for their currencies which we have used to pay troops and for "certain other strictly militaray expenditures not covered by reverse lend-lease."

The moment any disbursements, such as troop pay, are made in foreign currencies by army or navy finance officers, Washington is notified and the dollar amount is taken out of the war or navy department's appropriation.

Help for Italy.

In the case of Italy, the United States is providing dollars to the Italian government in exchange for the Italian currency we pay our troops—but for no other purposes.

These payments are made with the understanding they will not prejudice any ultimate financial settlement with Italy.

Under the armistice terms the United States is not required to furnish these dollars, but we do it to help Italy in view of her status as a co-belligerent.

N. J. OFFICIAL, FOE OF HAGUE, CITED ON CHECK COUNT

Newark, N. J., March 13 [Special].—Investigation of the personal finances of New Jersey's Republican attorney general, Walter D. Van Riper, which both Van Riper and Gov. Edge have characterized as political persecution, culminated today in Van Riper's indictment on a series of charges involving an alleged check kiting conspiracy.

Van Riper is a political foe of Mayor Hague of Jersey City and for months has been bearing down heavily on gambling in Hague's stronghold of Hudson county. Last month a federal grand jury indicted Van Riper on a charge of being involved in illegal gasoline dealings.

The new indictments allege that between July, 1942, and last Oct. 7 Van Riper circulated a stream of checks among four accounts, with as much as $4,000 afloat at one time. Kited checks for the entire period totaled $400,000, it was said.

Charges leveled against Van Riper include use of the mails to defraud, misapplication of bank funds, and conspiracy to abstract and misapply bank funds. Van Riper said he was being "accused of technical violations of the banking law." Three other persons were indicted with him.

Venezuela Establishes Ties with Soviet Union

CARACAS, Venezuela, March 13 (AP).—Venezuela and the soviet union have agreed to establish diplomatic and consular relations, the government announced tonight.

AMNESIA VICTIM IN CITY HALL.

Unable to remember his name or where he lives, a well dressed man about 25 years old was turned over to police yesterday when he was found wandering in the city hall. His finger prints were sent to the federal bureau of investigation in an effort to identify him.

5TH ARMY UNITS BLAST NAZIS OFF 5,900 FOOT PEAK

ROME, March 13 (AP).—Fifth army troops have blasted the Germans from 5,900 foot Monte Spigolino, 14 miles northwest of Pistoia, and repulsed enemy counter-attacks upon the peak, allied headquarters announced today. The activity flared in a section southwest of Monte Belvedere, which the Americans hold. Monte Spigolino is about three miles east of Piansinatico, on highway 12 running from Lucca to Modena.

Like the action in the Belvedere region, the advance apparently was designed to correct 5th army positions for whatever may be in store on the Italian front in the coming months. The Germans farther west and along the coast sent artillery salvos into allied forward positions, and allied patrols made contact with the enemy in the coastal region.

A navy bulletin announced that P. T. boats operating off Mesco point in the gulf of Genoa nortwesst of Spezia engaged a northbound convoy of eight lighters, sank two with torpedoes and hit a third.

CHICAGO OFFICER FIXES RAILROAD SO IT CAN RUN

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 7TH ARMY, March 13.—Vice president in charge of hot boxes on a narrow gauge railroad is the title now held by Lt. Robert M. Snodell, 8116 Evans av., Chicago. Snodell is commander of a military police detachment in the 42d Rainbow infantry division.

Some of his men, including Pvt. Vernon Boehner of Hubbard lane, Crete, Ill.; Sgt. Howard Rowatt, Carterville, Ill., and Staff Sgt. Donald Crowe, Rochester, Minn., found the railroad in the divisional sector and also came upon a one cylinder engine, which the Germans had hidden in the hills.

"They tinkered with that engine until they had it working," Snodell explained. "And now they use it to pull flat cars which carry water and other supplies to the front. They wished the vice president designation on me. But I haven't had any letterhead made yet."

The lieutenant is the son of Walter Snodell, northern passenger agent for the Nashville, Chattanooga, and St. Louis railroad in Chicago. The elder Snodell has sent his son data on railroad operation but it doesn't help much because the "Rainbow, Alsatian, and Points North line" doesn't carry passengers.

Corp. Rudy Laski, 2636 Carmen av., Chicago, has been with the 3d infantry division two years now and finds it a bit different from traveling the baseball circuits back home. This game is for keeps.

Rudy played shortstop for three years for Amundsen High school in Chicago and then in 1932 joined the Knoxville, Tenn., club of the Southern association. Other chores along the line were with Atlanta in the same association, with Milwaukee and Toledo in the American association, with Pensacola in the Southeastern league, and at Fort Ord, Cal. He had a "cup of coffee" with the Chicago Cubs one spring.

Rudy organized and operated a circuit of eight G. I. clubs in Africa in 1942-1943 and when he gets out of service he wants to own a class B club in the United States.

Corp. John Tuzinski, 2138 Milwaukee av., Chicago, a rifleman with a 15th corps unit, heard a noise and saw showers of dirt from a thicket ahead. He was certain he had come on a German digging in. But his shouted challenge drew no response. Tuzinski opened fire and advanced carefully to the now quiet thicket. He found his quarry—a 375 pound wild boar, dead.

Maj. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, commanding the 15th corps, has awarded five bronze stars and a silver star to men from Illinois. The latter decoration went to Lt. Richard H. Stephens, Urbana.

Those receiving the bronze stars were Warrant Officer [j. g.] Frederick W. Wittleder, 1354½ Greenleaf av.; Tech. Sgt. T. Bellack, 5700 Pensacola av., and Pvt. Alphonse S. Manno, 5310 Van Buren st., all of Chicago; Capt. Alexander A. Wanek, 1425 S. 20th av., Maywood, and Staff Sgt. William Motherway Jr., Urbana.

Manno is with a tank destroyer battalion, the others are with a mechanized cavalry squadron. The presentations were for heroism and meritorious action.

For similar conduct the 63d infantry division awarded bronze stars to three men with medical detachments. The recipients are Pvt. Robert W. Ricketts, 6433 Yale av., Chicago; Pvt. Ervie Borden, Escanaba, Mich., and Sgt. Earl G. Ontko, Kenosha, Wis.

* *

Maj. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, commander of the 36th infantry division, commended the 132d field artillery battalion truck drivers for meritorious performance of duty in an 80 mile journey. They moved the guns for 13½ hours over difficult, congested roads in the rain and blackout without damage to equipment and without a single accident.

Among midwesterners mentioned in the citation are Sgts. Harry R. Haase, West Chicago, Ill., and Harold R. Hughes, Tiffin, O.; Corps. Anthony J. Opeka, 403 10th av., North Chicago, Ill., and Morton G. Perry, Bluffton, Ind.

R. A. F. RIPS BARMEN AND MAIN RAIL LINE LEADING INTO RUHR

LONDON, March 13 (AP).—R. A. F. heavy bomber airmen writing off Dortmund and Essen as dead cities of the Ruhr after two of their greatest daylight attacks of the war, today assaulted Barmen, on the southern edge of the great industrial valley.

R. A. F. heavy bombers then blasted targets in the Ruhr tonight, and Mosquitos made their 22d consecutive attack on Berlin. The night blow, directed against the last main rail line leading into the Ruhr, marked the fourth time the four engined British bombers had struck the reich's rich industrial region in three days.

United States 8th air force heavy bombers took their first day of rest in a week, but Fortresses and Liberators from 15th air force bases in Italy bombed Regensburg, 90 miles northeast of Munich, the birthplace of nazism. Their Mustang escorts strafed railroads on a wide sweep over the area between Munich and Regensburg.

Smoke rose 20,000 feet over Regensburg, where there are numerous aircraft factories.

CHICAGO FLYER, DYING, DOWNS FOE; WINS DSC

ROME, Italy, March 13 (AP).—Staff Sgt. William K. Guilfoil, who altho mortally wounded shot down an enemy fighter that was attacking his Flying Fortress, has been posthumously awarded the distinguished service cross.

Staff Sgt. W. K. Guilfoil.

Guilfoil's home was at 6239 N. Fairfield av., Chicago, Ill. He was a tail gunner on a United States 11th air force mission against the Bologna railway yards on Oct. 5, 1943. He was knocked down and severly injured by flak, but returned to man his guns. Then a Messerschmitt-109 attacked. The American gunner's straight shooting caused the Messerschmitt to explode so close that a fragment hit him in the face. He kept on shooting at other enemy planes until he died.

Guilfoil's action was disclosed when the pilot of the Fortress escaped from enemy territory a year later.

42,000 French Casualties in 7 Months, Says General

PARIS, March 13 (AP).—The French 1st army, in a seven month campaign, has lost about 10,000 killed and 32,000 wounded, its commander, Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, announced today. He described the losses—almost 17 per cent of his effectives—as "very light." In seven months since D-day in southern France, the French took 92,255 prisoners, the general said.

THIS IS FRANCE: SURFACE CALM, FERMENT BELOW

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 13.—After about 4,000 miles of travel by car, train, and plane thru France, six months after its liberation from the Germans, one gets this picture of the country:

1. All France is calm. The people are taking a patient view of reconstruction problems, and the difficulties expected by some sectors in disbanding the FFI [French Forces of the Interior] have not been realized. Whatever tendency there was for local FFI groups in the early days to assume authority has been eliminated.

2. At the same time, there is much political ferment, with people of all shades of political opinion believing that some kind of social change must be made, with public control and nationalization of industry, the trusts, and the banks. They differ only on the method and form of doing this.

De Gaulle Aids Criticized.

3. Gen. de Gaulle is generally accepted, but there is much murmuring against some of his ministers and dissatisfaction with the way they have handled this winter's crisis.

4. An appalling amount of destruction has been done by allied aviation, which is misunderstood and resented. Hundreds of French towns and villages have been knocked down, hundreds of thousands of French dwelling houses and buildings have been destroyed.

5. Hundreds of thousands of French people are hungry and suffering from lack of clothing and medical supplies.

Industry Languishes.

6. French industry is languishing after five years of misery under the occupation, which exhausted the country's resources, and there is little importation of raw materials because of the lack of shipping, usage of ports for military purposes, and the fact 3,000,000 French workers are still held in Germany as prisoners or laborers.

7. Black market operators, who apparently have political influence, don't want to see the situation cleared up as regards food distribution. This element affects the food shortage as much as lack of transport, and it is openly charged that licenses have been refused to charcoal burning trucks that could be used to haul food.

8. Because of so many material cares, most French voters are apathetic about muncipal and cantonal elections, which will be held in April and May.

9. Railway transportation has improved.

Want Allied Troops Out.

10. French of all classes would like to see the country cleared of allied troops as soon as possible and the country's ports opened to commercial shipping rather than army transports. Great numbers also believe the allies should be giving more material aid to the civilian population.

Finally public opinion is inclined to be supersensitive on all political matters affecting France's position as a world power. There is undisguised admiration for Russia in wide sections of the population.

BONN HEAVILY DAMAGED FROM BOMBING RAIDS

90 Per Cent of University Buildings Suffer.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BONN, Germany, March 13.—Within clear view and under infrequent firing of Germans directly across the Rhine, this ancient university town today was functioning again on a temporary basis with most of the city officials it had before the 1st division captured it on Friday.

Bombings have destroyed an estimated half of the city, altho much of the residential area is still habitable. The university has not held one class for two years. Ninety per cent of its buildings are badly damaged.

Beethoven's home is cracked and shaken by near bomb misses, but is still a recognizable dwelling. Intact, too, is Bonn's cathedral, altho it has been damaged enough that its priests have to hold services in the crypt.

Accept Military Government.

This, in brief, is Bonn, four days after American occupation. Its once badly frightened residents are now docilely accepting the American military government [AMG], even making frequent friendly overtures, altho the German army is only a few hundred yards away across the Rhine.

"We have had no trouble and we expect none," said Maj. Everett S. Cofran, Washington, D. C., former city planner and now executive officer for Maj. Edwin N. Boney, Fresno, Cal., head of the military government detachment.

"The town has about half its 90,000 peace time population," said Cofran. "The people had until two weeks ago, when transportation became scarce, to pull out and go east if they wanted to. The fact that half remained would indicate they were willing to take their chances with us."

Cofran said he believed that most of the 500,000 volumes in the university's famous library had been safely removed before the bombings. Likewise religious relics from the cathedral are believed to have escaped damage.

Investigate Officials.

Cofran said the city government status quo would be maintained until all officials had been investigated by army intelligence officers. Those with a clean bill of health would be retained and would be ordered to hire other suitable persons.

As far as the military government agents knew no Nazi officials were left in town. The Gestapo and Nazi party headquarters had been destroyed by bombing and their personnel left well before the arrival of the 1st division.

Several thousand civilians live in the city's air raid bunkers, which have a capacity for 25,000, but the lack of electric power has stopped their ventilating systems. Others dwell in cellars or undestroyed homes. They can circulate on the streets only between 8 a. m. and 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. and 4 p. m.

With stocks stored in cellars against the arrival of the Americans, the people, according to Cofran, have enough to eat for several weeks.

Camp Outside Town.

Military government also has established outside town a center for displaced Russians, Dutch, Belgian, French, Czech, and other such persons taken into Germany for forced labor. Cofran estimates there are 1,200 in the city and another 800 in the district. Sixty so far have been taken to the center where they sleep on captured German blankets and eat captured German food.

When the military government detachment of 10 officers and 15 men entered Bonn a half hour after the 18th infantry regiment had cleared the town, they found 100 of the 140 city policemen still in uniform. Because their garb with its swastika looked too military, the police were ordered to shift into civilian clothes and were provided with arm bands which are now seen everywhere.

Hold State Policemen.

Several hundred state policemen found in Bonn are being held in the custody of the city police chief. The army is investigating a report that some of these state cops fought against the American army.

Maj. Boney's men found that the city water supply, while short, was still adequate and that public health and sanitation were in good shape. Twenty-five civilian physicians remained. Some dozen civilians, killed in the fighting and left on the streets, were buried by the military.

Some 6,000,000 marks [nominally $2,400,000] were found in three commercial and three savings banks and in the city's treasury were 2,000,000 marks.

GODESBERG SPARED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BAD GODESBERG, on the Rhine, March 13.—Like a sparkling but somewhat tarnished gem, this lovely resort, where Hitler once met with the late Neville Chamberlain in 1938, sits nervously on the Rhine, five miles south of Bonn.

Nervously, because at any moment the holocaust of war which had bypassed Godesberg may return. Allied bombs had spared the town, used by the Germans as a hospital center, but now, with its possession by American troops who took it almost without a shot, the Germans, sitting angrily across the river, may decide to do something more drastic than the few shells which have been lobbed over.

The city's streets today were empty of civilians. But, you were conscious of their eyes as you drove past their palatial homes, filled with wealthy residents and equally wealthy refugees from the bombings in Cologne and Bonn. They are permitted to come out into the open only between 8 a. m. and 12 noon, altho later the farmers who live on the outskirts will be allowed to return for longer work in their fields.

Hitler's Favorite Hotel.

You could, if you wanted to, drive down to the water's edge and visit Hotel Dreesen, Hitler's favorite hostelry. You could sit in his room or Von Ribbentrop's favorite, and look across the river at another hotel where Chamberlain had stayed.

You could have fingered Hitler's bedspread, toyed with his night table, examined the room's ornaments, and felt cozy about history. Or you could have chatted with the hotel proprietor and sampled his well assorted stock of wines and cognacs.

You could have done all this, with time. But today there was no time. We could only glance at the incongruity of Godesberg, sitting untouched on the German army's doorstep.

But it was time to hurry home, and Godesberg, loveliest of the German cities thus far captured by the Americans, must wait a more leisurely examination.

COLOGNE QUITS CELLARS

COLOGNE, March 13 (AP).—Thousands of Cologne residents, emerging from cellars for the first time since American occupation of this Rhine river city, mill around allied military government headquarters in search of information.

From loudspeakers they learn of a 6 p. m. to 7 a. m. curfew, that they must surrender all arms, that German service men—many of whom are believed to have discarded uniforms for civilian clothes—must report and that all looting must cease.

Hundreds line up to ask for various AMG departments. They seek the answer to such problems as:

"My husband reported to the main police station yesterday. Must he now also report to the precinct station?"

No Elevator Service.

Handling the bulk of the questioners are Captains Albert L. Emerson, Warrensburg, N. Y., and Arthur E. Ellimott, Joplin, Mo. Tho inquirers swirl about them, they remain unperturbed, directing callers to offices scattered over seven floors of a building without elevator service.

Many of Cologne's residents have lived underground for a long period.

Freed foreign workers are another AMG problem. Five hundred and fifty are being cared for in a refurnished German concentration camp in the western suburb of Muengersdorf. Nine nationalities are represented, Russia, Poland, France, Belgium, Holland, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Luxemburg, and Italy. Seventy-five per cent are women.

REPORT NORWAY NAZIS TAKE OVER OSLO POLICE JOB

'Ready for Action,' Says Swedish Paper.

New York, March 13 [Special].—German authorities in Oslo have assembled 1,500 members of the Norwegian Nazi Hird organization with "full military equipment," and have turned over some police duties to them, the Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter said today.

"Unparalleled chaos" in the Norwegian capital was predicted by Norwegian circles in Stockholm, the newspaper said, if responsibility for the maintenance of order should be taken from the ordinary Oslo civilian police and turned over to the Hird, as it was rumored the Germans planned.

Learn Street Fighting.

Hird members have received "military police training and learned street fighting," said the dispatch, as reported to the office of war information. "Detachments already have assumed some tasks which formerly belonged to the Oslo police, for instance, the guarding of public buildings and Nazi party premises.

"Placards have been put up thruout the city announcing that Hird political soldiers are now 'ready for action.'"

5,400 Evacuees Arrive.

The Oslo evacuation office, the dispatch added, has announced that 5,400 evacuees from North Norway already have reached the capital. Only 600 of them could be accommodated in the city or its suburbs and "the stream of refugees has not yet ceased," it was said.

The notorious Grini concentration camp also was reported to be dangerously overcrowded, with a total of 4,981 internees.

ROOSEVELT ASKS 4½ BILLION LESS FOR NAVY IN '46

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—President Roosevelt asked congress today to appropriate $23,719,153,050 for the navy for the fiscal year 1945-'46, about 4½ billions less than asked for the current year.

The new navy budget provides for a navy of approximately 3,389,000 men, a marine corps strength of 478,000, and 173,165 in the coast guard.

This authorized total of 4,040,165 men compares with a strength of 3,870,039 men as of Dec. 31.

Plane Costs Reduced.

The nearly $24,000,000,000 for the year beginning July 1, compares with total appropriations of about $28,500,000,000 for 1944-'45 and $23,000,000,000 for 1943-'44.

The reduction from the current appropriations is accounted for largely by a cut of about $2,000,000,000 in previous estimates of the cost of the airplane program and about $4,000,000,000 in cash required for the shipbuilding program.

Meanwhile, a $259,109,700 four agency supply bill—more than half of it for the rapidly expanding state department and the justice department—received house appropriations committee approval today.

Its over-all total was $23,225,608 more than the same departments received for the current year.

Debate Begins Today.

For the 12 months beginning July 1, the bill will give the justice department $93,468,900; state department, $71,878,400; commerce department, $79,422,000, and the judiciary $14,390,400.

Debate on the measure is scheduled tomorrow.

Much of the $21,384,562 increase voted the state department, the committee said, is necessary because the department's activities "have become definitely intertwined with the economic and commercial activities of nations."

Subscribing generally to the department's program for expansion as outlined by Undersecretary Grew, the committee said "this country must avail itself of every opportunity and every means to prevent a repetition of the present conflagration." Grew had referred to the state department as "our first line of national defense."

Cash for War Crimes Group.

The committee approved a $60,000 item for expenses of United States participation in the united nations war crimes commission.

The justice department's funds include a $320,000 increase in the anti-trust division's allotment. The committee voiced a hope the division soon would be able to renew its drive against loan sharks and "clear up the entire loan shark business."

Singled out for commendation was the federal bureau of investigation. The committee rejected a budget bureau recommendation for reductions that would have required the FBI to close five field offices and dispense with the services of 400 agents.

CHINESE REWIN SITE OF FORMER U. S. AIR BASE

CHUNGKING, China, March 13 (AP).—The Chinese high command tonight confirmed that Suichwan, former site of a United States 14th air force base in Kwangsi province, had been recaptured Sunday by Chinese troops and that Japanese forces north of the city were being mopped up.

The high command said that the Chinese troops pushed on toward Kanhsien, about 50 miles southeast and the site of another former United States air base lost to the Japanese in their drive last summer.

West of the Canton-Hankow railroad, the high command reported, Chinese troops were battling for the town of Ichang.

Spring Weather

Chicago luxuriated in what Forecaster Reinhold Schmidt called California weather yesterday when the thermometer reached a new high for the year of 60 degrees. The entire month of March, the forecaster said, has been warmer than usual, averaging 9 degrees above normal each day. The balmy temperature, Schmidt said, is the result of air currents striking Chicago from the Pacific instead of from Canada.

YANKS SEIZE 4 MORE VILLAGES ON MINDANAO

Press Japs Back Into Zamboanga Hills.

MANILA, March 14 [Wednesday]—(AP).—Forty-first division troops, seizing four villages north of captured Zamboanga, pursued the disorganized Japanese into the Mindanao hills against increasing resistance Monday.

Gen. MacArthur said in his bulletin today that Maj. Gen. Jens A. Doe's forces captured the villages of Canelar, Santa Maria, Sinonog, and Pitogo. Tanks paced the drive.

On Luzon the Yanks captured Antipolo, southern anchor of the Shimbu line east of Manila, after a fierce fight. To the south 11th air borne division troops reached Los Banos, site of the former internment camp, and Santo Tomas, on the main rail and highway route into southern Luzon.

The 158th regimental combat team captured the town of Batangas, capital of Batangas province, in a swift eastward sweep from Balayan bay. Batangas is on Batangas bay, on the north end of the Verde Island passage between Luzon and Mindoro.

ZAMBOANGA IN RUINS

BY WALTER SIMMONS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ZAMBOANGA, Mindanao, P. I., March 12 [Delayed].—Storied Zamboanga, largest city in the world in area and long an American military outpost in the orient, was completely in the hands of American troops today.

They marched in against light opposition at 4 p. m. yesterday. Only a few snipers lurked in the debris littered city. The Yanks killed five of them.

A tour thru the city, deserted by civilians for days by guerrilla order, was a repetition of Lingayen, Tarlac, and Manila. Almost every business building was shattered and gutted. The streets were covered with fallen leaves nd sand heaved up by American bombing and shelling. Here and there were Jap pillboxes. Already military police had tacked up a few "off limits" signs to safeguard captured Jap dumps of medical supplies and warehouses filled with generators, engines, radio and signal equipment, and rice.

Japs Still Shell City.

Back in the hills, the Japs were still throwing shells at the city and the waterfront.

This is being written on a small boat carrying Lt. Gen. Eichelberger, 8th army commander, back to the fleet flagship after an early morning inspection of the city. Only a moment ago a shell of at least 105 millimeter size landed in the water with a terrific concussion and splash, less than 50 yards away.

Gen. Eichelberger and Adm. Forrest B. Royal, amphibious force commander, found Zamboanga's 300 yard long reinforced concrete pier in good condition. The asphalt topped structure had been slightly damaged by two Yank bomb hits and a 50 foot section had been ripped out by a Jap demolition charge. Engineers said the damage was easily repairable. Adm. Royal said the dock was long enough to accommodate one Liberty ship and one smaller vessel at the same time. Other arms of the pier will provide unloading space for smaller ships.

Buildings Burned Out.

Purple morning glories, crimson bougainvillea, graceful palms, and stubby banana trees lent a touch of beauty to the city despite its desolation. "This must have been a nice place to live at one time, even if it is only six degrees above the equator," said Tech. Sgt. James Charves of Park Ridge, Ill.

Public buildings and rows of Chinese shops were burned out. Much of the damage seemed old, and apparently dated back to the Jap naval shelling of 1942, but the ruins of many buildings were still smoking.

The asphalt streets were pitted and holed where the engineers had removed numerous mines. These were of various types—naval depth charges, such as were used in Manila, horned sea mines, stove pipe and pie plate mines, bombs, and even 75 millimeter shells.

In Plaza Pershing, near the waterfront, the arch was undamaged but the statue of Rizal, Filipino martyr hero, was headless. Trees were scorched and broken, and the entire area was covered with rubble and bits of splintered wood.

It was obvious the cleanup of Zamboanga would take weeks, and its rebuilding would require years.

Yanks Lead Guerrillas.

Capt. Donald Le Couvre of Bulger, Pa., guerrilla leader in charge of 1,100 Moro hill fighters, explained the absence of civilians. "We ordered them to the hills," he said. "We've got native M. P.s up there to make them stay put until its safe for them to come down again."

Capt. Le Couvre was a mechanic with the famous 19th bombardment group at Clark field when the war broke out. He escaped to Lanao province on Mindanao in January, 1942, and was assigned to duty at Malabang, near Cotabato. When the Japs stormed into Mindanao, he withdrew to the trackless jungles with Moro guerrillas, and began to organize them under the supervision of Col. Wendell Fertig, an American mining engineer.

His assignment was to keep the Japs from establishing bases, to interrupt their communications, and to gather information to be radioed out. Several times he had narrow escapes—one shack he occupied was surrounded; he escaped thru a tunnel and by a secret trail.

Supplied by Submarines.

His men at first were armed only with bolos and old Enfield and Springfield rifles, but it wasn't long before carbines, tommy guns, and other modern ordnance arrived by submarine. Their job wasn't primarily killing Japs, but Capt. Le Couvre said his men "took care" of more than 250.

The captain said the Japs had 15,000 men in Zamboanga as late as May, 1944. They were quartered in houses, in Pilar, an ancient Moro stronghold, and in the Pettitt barracks, which were established by the Americans in 1939. A huge Jap oil storage tank was erected in the tree-shaded barracks area. Months ago, it was holed by Yank aircraft cannon.

The moss covered fort showed evidences that the Jap garrison had departed hastily. Mess kits were half filled with uneaten rice, and the stone floors were covered with personal gear. One room, apparently used as a Japanese school, had childish crayon drawings pasted on the walls.

In shattered Zamboanga homes troops found bits of Japanese feminine finery. The women were reported to have left on a transport about six months ago.

The area near the port and the barracks was dotted with plane dropped American surrender leaflets. "Those made the Japs madder than anything," said Capt. Le Couvre. "When a Jap saw one of those he would turn purple in the face, rip it to bits, and stomp on it."

Yank Signs Still Up.

The old iron flagpole at the barracks was broken off by a shell hit, but a 43d infantry sign still hung on a building. Half hidden in tall grass on the parade grounds were tubes and mounts for Jap 120 millimeter guns. They had never been assembled.

While troops still prowled thru the ruins the unit which took the city pushed east and north with armor tipped patrols in search of the retreating enemy. Technically, the Japs were still in the city, for its limits extend far into the interior and include unexplored territory.

To the west another unit pushed along the coast. Half way up a rising tier of hills troops found a heavily fortified system of interlocking trenches and pillboxes which the enemy had abandoned.

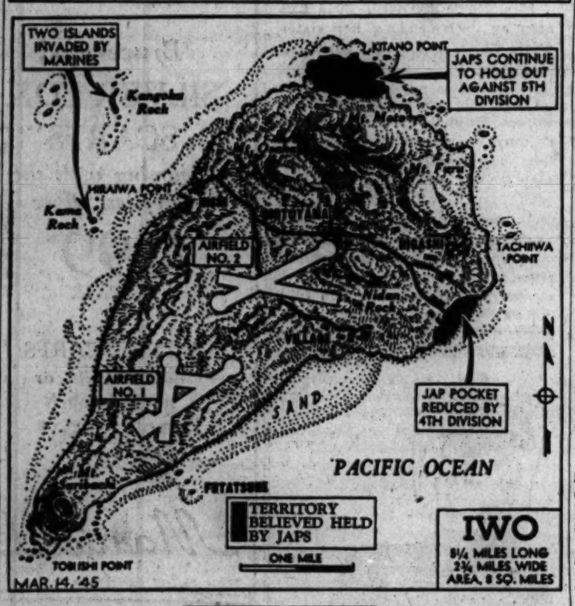
Invade Two Isles Off Iwo



Marines Seize Two Barren Rocks Off Coast of Iwo Isle

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Guam, March 14 [Wednesday]—(AP).—Elements of two marine divisions landed unopposed Tuesday on two barren rocks off the west coast of Iwo to end their use by the Japanese as mortar positions.

Altho mortar fire from the rocks had been a problem earlier in the Iwo campaign, the marines found neither enemy troops nor guns there.

The rock landings, announced by Adm. Nimitz today, were amphibious operations involving units of the 3d and 4th marine divisions.

Islets Flank 5th Division.

Kangoku Iwa, the northernmost of the two islets, puts the marines almost due west of Kitano point. The other islet invaded was Kama, due west of the west central coast. Both flank the Iwo sector assigned to Maj. Gen. Keller E. Rockey's 5th marine division. Kama rock is 1,000 yards off the coast and Kangoku rock is 2,700 yards away.

On Iwo a small Japanese pocket on the east coast at Tachiiwa point was further reduced Tuesday by Maj. Gen. Clifton B. Cates 4th division.

During the day 115 more of the maze of caves used by the Japanese were sealed up.

General Escapes Bullet.

Lt. Gen. Holland M. Smith, commander of marines in the Pacific, narrowly escaped death or injury Tuesday while watching the fighting in the northern sector. He and several others were standing on a rock, perfect targets for a sniper, when a concealed Japanese fired on them. Smith said the bullet missed him by six inches.

A by-passed resistance pocket near Tachiiwa point, easternmost extremity of the island, remained Monday evening to be wiped out in the 4th division sector.

BURMESE LOOT AS FIGHT RAGES FOR MANDALAY

BY ALFRED WAGG.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH BRITISH TROOPS ATTACKING MANDALAY, Burma, March 13.—While High Priest U Kanti was waiting for British and empire troops to force the Japanese from his temples on Mandalay hill, other troops met stiffening resistance from the Japs in Fort Dufferin in Mandalay.

The battle surged into a crescendo of earth shaking sounds, with big guns, Bren guns, Jap high velocity rifles and light machine guns, and many other weapons adding to the roar.

Leading units of a Punjab regiment was Maj. John Jume Pendergast, an Irishman from the Channel Islands and the first officer to enter Mandalay. His great uncle led red coats into that Burma city to capture it from the late King Thibaw.

Battle Snipers in Church.

Punjabis, reënforced by the Royal Berkshire regiment, were duelling away with snipers in a church near Fort Dufferin. Tanks blasted buildings into shambles.

Half-caste Indians and Burmese, who were interned by the Japs months ago when most of the population was evacuated, were reported starving inside the fort. British intelligence reports indicated that the fort's garrison had been expecting reënforcements and was not very large.

As the battle raged around the fort, Burmese civilians, ignoring the death dealing blows about them, looted a Japanese owned clothing store and hauled away sewing machines.

Tommy Wounded, Still Smiles.

Nearby a surgeon from Glasgow, Scotland, was treating the wound of a Tommy. The soldier had been lying in a ditch all night but was attempting to smile courageously.

Thick plumes of smoke rose as artillery pounded the Japs on the southern slopes of Mandalay hill. Last night the hill, with the dark silhouettes of pagodas and temples, looked much like a lighted Christmas tree from the small fires dotting the hillsides.

Gurkhas Bar Escape Paths.

CALCUTTA, India, March 13 (AP).—Dispatches from British headquarters in Mandalay today said Gurkha patrols had pushed ahead on two sides of moated Fort Dufferin and virtually sealed all its main escape routes.

From the Irrawaddy bridgehead west of Mandalay other British troops were moving toward the city and had captured six towns.

To the south, the British 4th corps was meeting increased resistance in the Meiktila area. It was disclosed that it was the 4th division that halted the Japanese invasion of India last year on the Imphal Plain.

Lt. Comdr. Alexander is married, and his wife, Laura, a former naval nurse, resides in Anaheim, Cal., with their 16 months old daughter, May Susan.

Chief of 'Red Raiders' Bomber Outfit Killed

BLAST FAILURE TO UTILIZE IDLE REPAIR WORKERS

Labor, Management Join Criticism.

San Francisco, Cal., March 13 [Special].—Labor leaders and a spokesman for ship yard management concurred today in charging that government ship repair jobs are being taken to ports where there is a shortage of labor, while San Francisco ship repair workers stand idle.

The charge was made at a conference called by the metal trades council [AFL] and participated in by representatives of the war man power commission and the war production board. Further conferences to discuss written grievances will be held, it was said.

Alleged refusal of the government to utilize repair facilities in San Francisco ship yards is complicating a work shortage problem said to be increasing in seriousness as ship yards in this area are nearing the end of their war shipbuilding contracts, labor leaders said. Several thousand men and women have been laid off in recent months and big layoffs are reported impending before the end of 1945.

Oppose "Critical" Designation.

WMC and WPB men at the conference hinted the government may accede within 90 days to the metal trades council demand that this area be removed from the "No. 1 critical labor shortage area list."

"This port is being deliberately passed up as a ship repair center," Al Wynn, secretary of the metal trades council, told the conference. "Why haul ships into this port and then haul them out again because some one doesn't like the way our hair is combed here?

"If the authorities wish to pass up this port, let them say so," Wynn challenged. "But if they wish to keep skilled men here ready for work, let them bring the repair jobs here."

Backed by Management.

Julian F. Arntz of the Bethlehem Steel company, who said he was speaking for the whole management group represented at the conference, suggested that a committee is needed to assist in the allocation of repair jobs.

"Do those who allocate repair jobs for the government have what might be called real grassroots information?" he asked. "Good hull jobs, bottom jobs, superstructure jobs have been brought in here and then hauled away to other ports for repair."

Ed Rainbow of the boilermakers' union said that "some repair jobs have even been sent east while our men walked the streets out of work."

A. F. Bartholomew said that Adm. Nimitz on a visit here a few months ago stated the navy would need more and more new ships and a faster turn around on repair jobs. A short time later, Bartholomew said, he visited San Diego and saw row on row of ships waiting for repair crews while good repair men were out of work in San Francisco.

Bartholomew compared the situation in the shipbuilding industry to "what happened in small arms ammunition production.

"First there was a big cutback in small arms ammunition ordered," he said. "Workers were thrown out of their jobs. Then we were suddenly told that the boys at the front lacked small arms ammunition."

40,000 Family Audience.

The new program, with emphasis on the best in music to take advantage of FM's extended tone range and fidelity of reproduction, should appeal to some 40,000 families in the Chicago area who had the good fortune to acquire FM receivers before their manufacture was halted by the war.

Among the new programs to be presented regularly by WGNB will be "1001 Tales in Music," with Claudia Cassidy, music critic of THE TRIBUNE, as narrator. This program also will feature poetry readings by John Barclay, and a weekly book review by the Rev. Preston Bradley.

Simultaneously with the introduction of the new program policy the WGNB staff will move to new offices in Tribune Tower adjacent to the new studio designed specifically to suit FM requirements.

COURT ORDERS SUPERVISION IN EXTORT ATTEMPT

Anthony Calonico, 17, of 3655 Ohio st., a junior in Austin High school, was placed under supervision of the Catholic Big Brothers by Judge Joseph J. Drucker in Boys' court yesterday after he admitted attempting to extort $300 from his former employer, Wallace Hoch, manager of the Alamo theater at 3639 Chicago av.

Calonico was seized by detectives from the Austin station Monday night near the Garfield park conservatory, which he had designated as the spot for Hoch to leave $300. The money was requested in two threatening letters to Hoch, on March 3 and 10, in which Calonico threatened to "tell all I know." A 15 year old boy with Calonico when he was seized was freed when he proved he knew nothing of the plot.

The court reduced the extortion charge to petty larceny.

YANKEES STUDY SPANISH TO WIN LATIN MARKETS

Look for Many Jobs in South America.

Greatly expanded trade with South and Central American nations, offering an increase in job opportunities for college graduates and business men who can speak Spanish, is expected soon after the war in Europe ends, exporters specializing in Latin American commerce reported yesterday.

If trade between the United States and its neighboring countries to the south is to expand to its full possibilities, however, business men in the United States must change their methods and adopt the "customer is always right" attitude that prevails here, the exporters warned.

American Goods Wanted.

"None of the Latin American nations is much of a manufacturing country so far, and they are literally starving for American goods now," said one exporter. The greatest market will be for electrical equipment and machinery, but "anything from jeeps to needles" will find a ready buyer south of the Rio Grande, he predicted.

Exporters warned that United States manufacturers and distributors must shed their "take it or leave it" attitude, adapt their salesmanship to Latin American tempo and regulations, and offer more liberal credit terms. Britain is expected to recover many of its Latin American markets, but German goods probably will not appear in any great quantity after the war.

Students of Spanish Increase.

North Americans who speak Spanish and Portuguese fluently can expect expanded job opportunities when manufacturing companies expand their export departments to cope with gains in trade; many manufacturers may wish to set up branch factories in Latin America and will need more Spanish speaking employes.

Reports from several colleges and universities yesterday indicated that young people are cognizant of the economic future Latin American trade represents. Enrollment in Spanish classes has increased considerably in recent years, it was reported.

The institute of inter-American affairs set up by Loyola university last year has gained 40 per cent in enrollment over that of last spring, said Dr. Paul S. Lietz, institute director.

Exporters Turn to Study.

Shipping, economics, trade practices, and language courses are geared to stress the Spanish idioms and many exporters are enrolled, Dr. Lietz said.

The Very Rev. Comerford J. O'Malley, president of De Paul university, said that in the last two years enrollment in Spanish classes had doubled on the north side campus and trebled in the downtown school.

Students preparing at the University of Chicago to teach Spanish in high schools apparently have a greater inducement to take teaching jobs now than ever before, said Clarence E. Parmenter, chairman of the department of Romance languages and literature.

Northwestern university reported a gain of only 157 students in Spanish classes in the last seven years, but Harvey Johnson, associate professor of Romance languages, said the United States as a whole showed a 15 per cent increase in Spanish students last fall.

Thomas L. Deuell Accused of Cruelty by His Wife

Mrs. Catharine Thompson Deuell, 37, of Barrington filed a suit for separate maintenance yesterday in Superior court, charging Thomas L. Deuell with cruelty. He is the owner of an investment company bearing his name, with offices in the Board of Trade building. They were married in 1928 and separated in January, 1945. Mrs. Deuell, represented by Atty. Robert E. Cantwell Jr., charged that Deuell is "infatuated with one Jane Doe." She asked custody of two children, Carroll, 11, and Thomas Jr., 8.

WINCHELL 'DARE' TAKEN AND HE'S PROVED FALSE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 13.—Rep. Howell [R., Ill.], reiterated today that the state department had authorized him to characterize as false a charge by Walter Winchell, smear columnist, that a former vice admiral of the Greek navy was pro-Nazi.

He so advised Winchell in a letter. The Broadway gossip said in a Sunday night broadcast he did not believe Howell got his information from the state department.

Originated in Springfield.

Alexander E. Sakellarious, the admiral, made an anti-Communist speech before the Mid-Day club in Springfield, Ill., on March 5. Walter Provine, club president, had first asked Howell to inquire into the truth of Winchell's assertion that Sakellarious was pro-Nazi.

Howell said he telephoned the state department and was told by an official that the admiral was not in good repute with the present Greek government but that there was no evidence to support Winchell's accusation. He so reported to Provine and the speech was delivered.

Challenged Howell.

Winchell, in his broadcast, referred slightingly to THE TRIBUNE's report of the incident, expressed his doubt that Howell had actually consulted the state department, and challenged Howell to ask him to furnish the proof of his charge. In regard to this last portion of the broadcast, Howell merely wrote Winchell that he could "use any information which you possess as you wish."

Howell said the "leader of the smear bund," as Winchell has been labeled in congressional debate, was obviously trying to stir up a controversy with a congressman in order to publicize himself.

Rebuilding of Cassino Will Begin Tomorrow

New York, March 13 (AP).—Reconstruction of the ruined Italian town of Cassino will begin Thursday, when the corner stone of the first building will be laid, an Italian broadcast said today.

INSTITUTE HEAD OPPOSES MEDIC CENTER PLANS

Dr. William F. Petersen, chairman of the board of governors of the Institute of Medicine of Chicago, yesterday voiced opposition to any further concentration of Cook county hospital facilities. He said contemplated expansion could better serve the population if scattered thruout the community.

The tendency today in hospital management is toward decentralization, he asserted at a round table discussion on post-war plans for increased medical care. The meeting, called by the health division of the Council of Social Agencies, was held at 16 N. Wabash av.

Dr. Petersen said he could see no reason to build a contagious hospital, because contagions were under control. He added that he also was opposed to the proposed west side medical center development because the County hospital group, where the project will be centered, is "oversized." President Clayton F. Smith of the county board of commissioners agreed to appoint a committee to study the problem.

TRIAL OF 2 N. Y. LABOR LEADERS NEARING JURY

New York, March 13 (AP).—District Atty. Frank S. Hogan, urging conviction of Labor Leaders Joseph S. Fay and James Bove on charges of extorting $368,000 from contractors on the Delaware water project, said today in his summation that the contractors "were afraid that unless they paid these sums to these defendants their businesses would be damaged."

Hogan followed summations lasting three hours by counsel for the defendants who told the jury Fay and Bove had not demanded money.

During a recess Westchester county District Atty. Elbert T. Gallagher said he would place Bove on trial in White Plains, N. Y., April 1 on charges of grand larceny. Bove was indicted in Westchester last year on 129 counts accusing him of the theft of $71,000 from local No. 60 of the Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers' Union of America at Yonkers, N. Y.

his call the discussion of Pacific and far eastern questions.

Britain was eased out of the alliance with Japan by the four power pact, in which the United States, the British empire, Japan, and France agreed to Pacific settlement of disputes among themselves and to consult on repelling aggression by any other nation.

At the same time, the nine power pact was signed by the nations having interests in the far east. Its declared object was to "stabilize conditions in the far east, to safeguard the rights and interests of China, and to promote intercourse between China and the other powers upon the basis of equality of opportunity." The last clause was what is known as the "open door" for business enterprise by foreigners in China.

The nine parties to the treaty were the United States, Great Britain, France, Japan, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Portugal, and China. Notably missing was Russia, which tho a far eastern power was under the cloud of bolshevism and as a quasi-enemy state not yet admitted to good standing in the society of nations.

Four Main Provisions.

In the treaty, the nine powers agreed to [1] "respect the sovereignty, the independence and the territorial and administrative integrity of China," [2] "Provide the fullest and most unembarrassed opportunity to China to develop and maintain for herself an effective and stable government"; [3] "Use their influence for the purpose of effectually establishing and maintaining the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations thruout the territory of China"; [4] "Refrain from taking advantage of conditions in China in order to seek special rights or privileges which would abridge the rights of subjects or citizens of friendly states, and from countenancing action inimical to the security of such states."

The treaty went into effect in 1922. Two years later Sun Yat-sen, president of the Chinese republic, induced Russia to surrender its concessions in China and in 1928 was proceeding to challenge the Japanese hegemony in Manchuria. A crisis developed and a clash was averted only by the intercession of the United States.

Japs Become Aggressive.

The next year, however, the Japanese adopted an aggressive policy, dispatched an army to China and resumed their expansion in Manchuria. By 1932 they were in complete control of Manchuria and established therein the puppet state of Manchukuo. Within another year they had penetrated Inner Mongolia, seized the province of Jehol and threatened the ancient capital of China, Peiping.

These Japanese aggressions were a clear violation of the nine power pact and the league of nations took cognizance of the threat to peace. The Hoover administration coöperated informally with the league, sending two American representatives to Geneva for that purpose. Henry L. Stimson, then Mr. Hoover's secretary of state, addressed identical notes to Japan and China on Sept. 24, 1931, similar to cablegrams sent by the league two days earlier. There followed a series of secret protests by Stimson to Japan against the infringement of American rights by the aggression in Manchuria.

Stimson Warns Tokyo.

On Dec. 10 the league appointed a commission of inquiry, including an American member, Maj. Frank R. McCoy. Japan continued to push its occupation of Manchuria and on Jan. 7, 1932, Stimson warned Tokyo that the United States could not admit the legality of a de facto situation and did not intend to recognize any agreement impairing the rights of the United States or its citizens in China under the nine power treaty. Furthermore, he said that the United States would not recognize any situation or agreement brought about by means contrary to the Kellogg pact renouncing war as an instrument of national policy.

Stimson communicated the terms of this note to Great Britain and France in advance of its dispatch to Toyko and invited their coöperation. The suggestion met a cool reception in London. A British foreign office statement on Jan. 11, 1932, related Japanese assurances that the open door would be respected in Manchuria, and concluded:

"His majesty's government have not considered it necessary to address any formal note to the Japanese government on the lines of the American government's note."

Britain Balks Move.

The secretary of state then, following the Shanghai disturbances, essayed to get the eight powers other than Japan to join in a statement explaining how Japan's aggressions violated the nine power pact. This move died aborning, however, when Stimson, after several telephone conversations with John Simon, the British foreign secretary, became convinced that the London government would not join in such a statement.

As a result of the refusal of the British government to support the United States in defense of the nine power treaty, Stimson was compelled to fall back on a unilateral statement of the American position. This he did on Feb. 4, 1932 in a letter to Sen. Borah in which Stimson said that if other governments would support the American declaration to Japan of Jan. 7, such joint action would "effectively bar the legality hereafter of any title or right sought to be obtained by pressure or treaty violation."

Pact Not Revived.

On March 11 the league came to Stimson's support with a resolution "not to recognize any situation, treaty or agreement which may be brought about by means contrary to the covenant of the league of nations." "Nearly a year later came the Lytton report from the commission of inquiry on the basis of which the league assembly on Feb. 24, 1933 declared that league members should not recognize Manchukuo.

The Hoover administration gave way to the Roosevelt regime a few days later. Hull made but a feeble attempt to challenge Japan's steadily augmenting domination of China and the nine power treaty entered upon a decline. With Japan's aggressions upon China steadily enlarging, the league made an effort to revive the pact. Its far eastern advisory committee, with a non-voting American representative participating, declared on Oct. 5, 1937 that Japan's actions "contravened Japan's obligations under the nine power treaty" and the Kellogg pact. The committee recommended that the far eastern powers be brought together "to seek a method of putting an end to the conflict by agreement."

Brussels' Dying Gasp.

With Secretary Hull supporting its action, the league assembly on Oct. 6 initiated this meeting which was held at Brussels beginning Nov. 3. The American delegate was the late Norman Davis. There were 19 countries represented, Japan refusing to attend. Maxim Litvinoff, the Russian delegate, made a strong plea for firm action and the imposition of sanctions on Japan was discussed, but neither the British nor the Americans nor the French were disposed to go that far in support of the nine power pact. When Japan declined a second invitation to attend, the delegates decided that it was impossible to carry out their commission to end the conflict by agreement and adjourned on Nov. 24 to meet again when the situation should become more favorable to conciliation. It never did and they never met again.

The dying gasp of the Brussels conference was a 12 point declaration reaffirming "the principles of the nine power treaty as being among the basic principles which are essential to world peace and orderly, progressive development of national and international life."

The relinquishment by the United States and Great Britain of extra-territorial rights and related privileges in China has been hailed as the only positive action vindicating the principles of the nine power pact up to date. Presumably Manchuria, in which the flouting of the nine power treaty by Japan led to the Asiatic war, will be restored to China. The Chinese seek also the retrocession of Hong Kong by Great Britain and the rendition of the British held Kowloon leasehold.

Generals Promoted

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—Nine lieutenant generals were nominated by President Roosevelt today to be full generals in the United States army. They are:

Joseph T. McNarney, supreme deputy allied commander, Mediterranean theater; Omar N. Bradley, commanding general, 12th army group, western front; Carl Spaatz, commanding general, United States strategic air force in Europe; George C. Kenney, commanding general, far east air forces; Mark W. Clark, commanding general, 15th army group in Italy; Walter Krueger, commanding general, 6th army, Philippines; Brehon B. Somervell, commanding general, army service forces; Jacob L. Devers, commanding general, 6th army group, European theater; Thomas T. Handy, deputy chief of staff, army.

Elevation of the nine would give the army 11 four star generals in active service. The others are Generals Stillwell and Malin Craig, chairman of the secretary of war's personnel board. The army has four five-star generals, Marshall, Arnold, MacArthur, and Eisenhower.

VICTIM WILLING TO BE CRUCIFIED, LIE TEST HINTS

Fred Walcher, 46, of 1638 N. Halsted st., crucifixion victim, submitted to a lie detector test yesterday in police headquarters. Results of the test, Capt. Patrick O'Connell of the Hudson av. station said, indicated that Walcher was a willing subject for the crucifixion as a means of publicizing his utopian dream of perpetual peace thru "mental attack."

Walcher refused, however, to name accomplices in the crucifixion, in which his hands were nailed to a crude cross and a superficial wound inflicted in his left side.

Atty. Harry J. Director late yesterday obtained from Judge Harry M. Fisher in Circuit court a writ of habeas corpus for Walcher. Director said that he would not seek to execute the writ immediately, pending an agreement among members of Walcher's family.

TAX CUTS $50,000 TO $309, SO HE PARES PAY TO $1

New York, March 13 (AP).—Frank Phillips, chairman of Phillips Petroleum company, has slashed his salary to $1 a year from $50,000 because of heavy tax deductions, it was disclosed today.

In a message to stockholders in the March issue of Philnews, the company house organ, Phillips said he did not see why the company should "pay $50,000 a year and benefit me by only $309.36."

Phillips explained that the shrinkage resulted from high federal income taxes and state levies. He said his pay, on top of his other income, is subject to federal and state taxes which leave him $309.36 from his salary as board chairman. The cut became effective Feb. 1.

Victim, 18, Who Lost Arm in Bus Crash to Get $49,000

Edward Lewandowski Jr., 18, of 2819 Throop st., will receive $49,000 from the Bluebird Bus Lines, Inc., for the loss of his right arm when a bus on which he was riding struck a telephone pole at 63d st. and La Porte av. last June 4, a settlement filed in Probate court yesterday disclosed. The agreement was reached Monday after jurors had been chosen to try Lewandowski's damage suit.

BROWNELL PUTS PARTY'S O. K. ON GREEN'S APPEAL

Appeal of Gov. Green for participation by the nation's fighting men in consideration of any peace proposal has the unanimous indorsement of the responsible leaders of the Republican party, Herbert Brownell Jr., chairman of the Republican national committee, asserted in Chicago yesterday.

Gov. Green's position also was indorsed by Jean A. Brunner of Forest Hills, N. Y., national commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. He said his organization officially had requested representation for the fighting men in planning foreign policy, but had been unable to get an answer from Secretary of State Stettinius.

The G. O. P. chieftain stopped here to have luncheon with Gov. Green and Werner W. Schroeder, Republican national committeeman, while on his way to New York. Brownell admitted the group might have discussed Gov. Green's letter to Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.], in which the Illinois governor called for participation in peace parleys by service men and for adherence to the principles adopted at the Mackinac conference, which insisted on "participation by sovereign nations."

Glad to Get Illinois Views.

Brownell said he was happy to get the views of Illinois Republican leaders as he had those of the party leaders of Colorado, Nebraska, and Iowa in a meeting last week in Lincoln, where he addressed students of the University of Nebraska.

The national chairman said the party's plans for a permanent organization of considerable size and scope would be announced in Washington, D. C., about April 1. He added that preliminary discussion of these plans with national committee members had disclosed encouraging prospects for the 1946 congressional elections.

Hopes for House Majority.

Brownell pointed out that the Republican party's house strength is 190 representatives, with 218 needed for a majority. Such a majority, he insisted, was not at all unlikely in 1946. With Republican strength in the senate now 40, Brownell said chances were growing brighter to get the nine additional senators needed to gain Republican control of that branch of congress.

The chairman said some attention was being given to the special election in the 2d Montana district, where a successor to Rep. James F. O'Connor will be elected on June 5. Altho the district is normally Democratic, Brownell said there was a chance for a Republican victory.

NEW HAMPSHIRE TOWNS VOTE FOR WORLD LEAGUE

Concord, N. H., March 13 (AP).—Returns from 212 of the 225 New Hampshire communities showed an overwhelming majority in favor of the Dumbarton Oaks post-war peace plan tonight. The total thus far was 13,847 in favor of and 751 against.

While most of the state's citizens were voting "yes" on this question of international relations, one of the state's oldest towns—Springfield—went over to the opposing column.

Citizens of this town near the Vermont border, said they "felt they were well represented in congress and didn't see why the question should be put to them."

"And we don't know a helluva lot about it," argued one townsman.

Citizens of the town of Newton also voted against the proposal. Sunapel citizens did not vote.

Rule of Conquered Areas by Trusteeships Proposed

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—A system of trusteeships to replace one nation mandates for the control of former enemy territories will be proposed at the forthcoming San Francisco security conference.

This was learned today as Secretary of State Stettinius began preliminary conferences with the United States delegation to the meeting, which starts April 25. Stettinius, who is chairman of the group, predicted its members would be able to "work as one team," but at the same time be free to pursue their "personal views and convictions."

The trusteeship proposal was not provided in the Dumbarton Oaks security plan which will chart the San Francisco parley. Evidently discussed among the Big Three representatives at Yalta, it is intended as a formula for the disposition of territories such as the Japanese mandated islands which now are a part of the Pacific battleground, thru joint control of two or more powers.

Long Conference Ended.

Officials here expected the San Francisco conference to last at least a month, but that it might stretch for some weeks beyond that if the additional time is needed for all represented nations to air their views on world organization.

Six of the delegates today met with Stettinius as the state department and later were received briefly by President Roosevelt at the White House. Secretary Hull, who is recuperating from his long illness at Bethesda Naval hospital, was absent. Hull hopes he will regain sufficient strength within the next month to go to San Francisco as senior adviser for the United States group.

Stettinius announced there would be other meetings "from time to time," evidently with a view to reconciling possible conflicting elements within the delegation or at least producing understanding of the various viewpoints.

Stassen Asks Flexibility.

Comdr. Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota governor and one of the Republican members of the delegation, said prior to the meeting that he believed the security organization "should have flexibility" to allow it to deal with future threats to the peace which cannot now be foreseen.

"I don't think we ought to set up a rigid organization at San Francisco," Stassen told a reporter. He indicated support, at least partially, for the view of Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.] also a member of the delegation, that the league designed to maintain peace should have authority to review some war time political agreements.

Inadvertently the names of the 94th infantry division and the 1st allied air borne army were not included in the list of American armies and divisions fighting in Europe and the Pacific printed in THE TRIBUNE on Sunday. The leaders of these two units are Maj. Gen. Harry J. Maloney and Lt. Gen. Brereton. Divisional commanders recently named include 2d armored, Brig. Gen. Isaac D. White; 90th infantry, Brig. Gen. Herbert I. Earnest, and 43d infantry, Maj. Gen. L. F. Wing.

Bath Tub Slaying Victim's Silver Fox Coat Missing

Disappearance of a silver fox fur coat owned by Mrs. Blanche Zimmerman, 39, who was found dead in a bath tub Feb. 17 at the Atlantic hotel, 316 S. Clark st., was reported to police yesterday by her husband, Harry R. Zimmerman. He said the coat was valued at $150. Zimmerman said he did not know whether his wife was wearing the silver fox or another coat when she last left their home at 4025 W. 16th st.

F. D. R. ASKS LAW SO EAST INDIANS CAN ENTER U. S.

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—President Roosevelt today called for speedy enactment of legislation which would permit East Indians to enter the country and become citizens.

In a letter made public by Chairman Dickstein [D., N. Y.] of the house immigration committee, Mr. Roosevelt said he believed the setting up of an Indian immigration quota would "help us win the war and establish a secure peace."

"The present statutory provisions that discriminate against persons of East Indian descent provoke ill feeling, now serve no useful purpose," the President said.

This Week's Post Brings Senator Vandenberg's Stirring Appeal to the Nation

LET'S TRY TO PREVENT WORLD WAR III

by ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG
United States Senator (Republican) from Michigan

IN blunt, forthright words—without frill or fanfare—Senator Vandenberg tells the American people how we can join in organizing permanent justice in a world of free men. Explains in non-partisan frankness, the hurdles we face, and the dangers of public ignorance, name-calling and unfounded criticism. Squarely and historically, he reviews the question of Presidential and Congressional initiative in settling past disputes—points in dramatic fashion to the one hope we have, and the one hope the world has, for a permanent and lasting peace. It is a statement of deepest significance that echoes the prayer in millions of hearts throughout a world at war.

BRITISH SUSPECT U. S. WILL WANT TOO MUCH HELP

M. P. Asks Pacific Needs Be Told Troops.

BY E. R. NODERER.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

LONDON, March 13.—Suspicion that the United States might saddle Britain with more than its share in the task of defeating Japan was voiced in the house of commons today after War Minister James Grigg said Britain must continue to play an active part in smashing the Japs once Germany is out of the war.

James Grigg.

Altho Grigg told the house there are compelling reasons of honor and interest why Britain should help lick the Japs, Wing Comdr. Archibald W. James, a Conservative, expressed the hope that the British army "will not be called upon to bear more than its fair share in relation to the United States army in the Pacific war."

Want to Know Need.

Frederick J. Bellenger, a Laborite, warned the government that unless it disclosed the purpose, size, and cost of armies required for the Pacific war, it would be impossible to satisfy a large number of troops that they are really needed for the fight against the Japs.

Bellenger said they would want to know, too, what contribution the Dutch and French are going to make toward the recovery of their far eastern empires. The troops are war weary and anxious to end the war and get home to peace time jobs, he added.

Grigg said there would be substantial releases from the forces after the defeat of Germany but that the complicated and difficult process of redeployment against Japan would have to be accompanied by a further civilian call up, including many men now in reserved jobs. He gave no details but the government in a white paper issued November, 1944, said men from 18 to 27 years were liable to call.

Grigg also disclosed that for the Pacific war he proposed to reduce to a three year maximum the tour of overseas service, which now varies from four to four and three-quarters years or even longer in certain cases.

Prepare Rhine Crossing.

The war minister in submitting army finances for the coming year told an impressive story of military operations for the last 12 months and disclosed the allies are now preparing a Rhine crossing in force. He said the Americans, outnumbering British and empire forces on the western front by more than two to one, had captured two-thirds of more than 1,000,000 Germans taken prisoner to date.

Some members of parliament, however, protested against what they described as the "silence of a morgue" that has hung over British operations on the western front. They contended Americans are much quicker in giving out details and credit for achievements of United States forces.

Earlier, Grigg announced he had recently taken up the question with British commanders in the various theaters, who are responsible for releasing details of divisions and regiments. When urged to make representations to Gen. Eisenhower for adequate publicity for British empires armies under his command, Grigg answered that the question was a delicate matter.

Explains Delays in Italy.

He explained delays in the conquest of Italy as due to the withdrawal of several American, British, and French divisions for west front operations.

Grigg announced that the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration already is coöperating with the military in plans for dealing with displaced persons in Germany and eventually would take over entire responsibility.

INDIANS QUIZZED IN DEATH BARED BY CRYING BABY

Woodrow Wilson White, 35, of 2059 Larrabee st., an Indian laborer, was questioned by police at the Chicago av. station yesterday in connection with the death of Cecil L. Hernandez, 38, of 15 E. Delaware pl., a laborer. Two other Indians, Robert Beaulio, 40, and Priscilla Brown, 35, were brought in later and questioned. Hernandez was found in a coma Monday after neighbors told police they had heard a baby crying in his apartment for several hours. The child, about 5 months old, was taken to St. Vincent's orphanage and was identified later as the baby of Miss Josephine Carriman, who told police she was Hernandez's common-law wife. Hernandez died yesterday in County hospital, and White was arrested when police learned that he was one of six Indians at a party Sunday night in Hernandez' apartment.

Claude D. Noble, as he waited in vain yesterday in Jackson park for a communication from the spirit of the late Clarence Darrow.

DARROW SPIRIT FAILS 7TH TIME TO KEEP 'DATE'

For the seventh time, the spirit of Clarence Darrow yesterday failed to respond to the plea of the deceased attorney's old friend, Claude D. Noble, that it communicate with him if it could.

The experiment took place on the seventh anniversary of Darrow's death. It was conducted on the bridge over the Jackson park lagoon just south of the Museum of Science and Industry.

Noble, who is a Detroit business man and an amateur magician, knelt on the bridge holding a picture of Ed Sullivan, newspaper columnist and friend of both Darrow and Noble. According to the agreement made by Darrow and Noble, the former, after death, would manifest himself if he could by knocking some object from the latter's hand.

There was deep silence as Noble and a little knot of onlookers waited. The picture remained steady in the magician's hand. The quiet seconds ticked by. Noble rose.

"I will be back next year and every year for the rest of my life," he said.

ENGLISH PRESS FOR EMPIRE VOW TO 'BUY BRITISH'

Paper Puts Trade Tie Above Pacts.

LONDON, March 13 (AP).—A drive to tighten the economic ties binding the British commonwealth of nations by securing an agreement on the controversial policy of preferential empire trade before the San Francisco world security conference was accelerated today.

Foreign Secretary Eden's declaration in commons last week that economic as well as security questions would be discussed at San Francisco has sharpened a public demand for assurance that British empire nations will speak with a single voice on international relations.

This problem will confront Prime Minister Churchill and Eden when representatives of the British commonwealth meet here early in April. The British leaders will attempt to convince the empire delegates that the future of their countries lies in close economic partnership.

Churchill Stand Awaited.

It is expected that Churchill will propose developing that partnership as a basic principle of the Conservative party when he addresses the party's annual conference on Thursday.

The London Daily Express said editorially:

"Imperial preference is the mainstay of our empire trade. That policy is only in its infancy. It should be developed even more toward empire economic unity or empire free trade."

"If, for example, the currency agreement of Bretton Woods destroys imperial preference . . . the Conservative party should say: 'No. We are reasonable people. We will do what we can. But we cannot contemplate such action, much as we should like to, even to oblige the Americans and their President.'"

Loss of Old Markets Seen.

Supporters of the empire preference policy plan contend that it is dictated by the war-spurred development of trade between the Americas and by indications that Russia plans to bring the Balkans within the soviet economic sphere.

Its opponents, however, contend that an exclusive "buy British" policy would stimulate the erection of restrictive trade barriers and prohibitive tariffs that might wreck all hopes of ending economic isolationism thruout the world.

Upon the outcome of this British controversy may hinge the measure of authority to be granted a future world league in settling disputes involving trade routes and the use of bases and ports for commercial shipping and air transportation.

Bette Davis received $241,083, Barbara Stanwyck $223,333, and Rosalind Russell $202,500. INTEREST SOARS IN RANDOLPH ST. RAIL TERMINAL

Green-Kelly Plan Revives Lake Front Dream.

Revived interest in a lake front railway terminal at Randolph st. to serve 17 railroads now entering the city from the south yesterday followed announcement that Gov. Green and Mayor Kelly plan to sponsor legislation for a Chicago metropolitan terminal authority in the present session of the legislature.

The lake front terminal project, first suggested in 1912, has been delayed thru the years by the reluctance of south side lines to give up three of the four terminals now in use and the lack of authority by city or state to force such consolidations. Legislation for the metropolitan terminal authority, now being drawn, would provide the required authority.

1919 Ordinance Paved Way.

Altho a city ordinance enacted in 1919 instructed the Illinois Central railroad to construct a consolidated terminal at Roosevelt rd., the Randolph st. location was substituted in 1933 because it is closer to the loop and the development of the city's business district has been northward, particularly along Michigan av.

The 1919 ordinance called for electrification of the Illinois Central's city and suburban tracks and other improvements, most of which the railroad carried out until the depression sharply reduced revenue and made further development of the program impossible. Illinois Central officials said they did not carry out the terminal part of the ordinance because other roads showed no inclination to join in the proposed plan.

The terminal authority, said Joshua D'Esposito, chairman of a committee appointed by Mayor Kelly to study the problems of a port authority, would have legal power to condemn needed property and to issue revenue bonds, and would be given power to control truck and bus terminals as well as railway consolidations.

Task Too Big for One Line.

"The problem has become too big to expect any one railroad to handle it," D'Esposito said. "It is not a question of new plans. We have plenty of plans. It is a question of getting the power to put a plan into effect."

There was some delay in preparing legislation because city attorneys were busy on traction matters, but now that the railway terminal project is largely in the hands of state senators and representatives, D'Esposito said he expected early completion of enabling bills and prompt presentation to the legislature at Springfield.

Chicagoans who became interested in lake front development as early as 1912 suggested a consolidation of the Illinois Central, La Salle, Dearborn, and Grand Central stations. In the city ordinance of 1919 the Illinois Central was instructed to proceed with such a terminal at Roosevelt rd., but railways using the other station appeared satisfied with their old locations.

Business Center Proposed.

By 1933 transportation conditions had changed greatly. New plans then were offered. Randolph st. was chosen as the site for the consolidated terminal and it was proposed to use the air rights of the 80 acres north of Randolph st. to the river and east of Michigan av. for development of a business center similar to the Grand Central station and Radio City in New York.

The lake front terminal had become a 75 million dollar project before the war precluded immediate construction. In June, 1940, plans were announced for construction of a 1,500 room hotel in connection with the terminal structure.

Interest in post-war projects to aid employment has revived the terminal consolidation plan, with most advocates favoring the Randolph st. location instead of the Roosevelt rd. site, originally selected in the belief the city's business section would expand southward. The Michigan av. bridge, Wacker dr., and La Salle st. developments reversed the trend, however.

ILLINI TRUSTEES REJECT STATE'S BUDGET DEMAND

University of Illinois trustees yesterday declined to cut the university's budget below the $25,758,576 set last January, despite a request from the state budgetary commission for a 1 million dollar reduction. The budget is for a two year period.

In refusing further cuts, the trustees pointed out that they reduced their original estimate $4,250,775 last January at the budgetary commission's request, altho the figure of $25,758,576 is still $6,128,672 above the figure for the previous biennium.

The trustees adjourned subject to call and indicated they will negotiate further with the budgetary commission and state officials. They said a further budget slash would necessitate elimination or curtailment of such new and proposed programs as special service to returned war veterans, the aeronautical program, and the small homes council.

KELLY MAKES TRACTION PLEA IN LEGISLATURE

Has No Hidden Ax to Grind, He Says.

Senators appeared dubious about chances of selling 87 million dollars worth of new traction securities. The money would be used to buy the "L" and surface lines, the latter having on hand 32 million dollars for improvements.

Within two or three years there would be 50 million dollars available for improvements, Collins said. Harrington's version was that there would be 45 million for this purpose, by selling an additional 15 million in securities. They said 128 millions in improvements are needed.

"If the people want improvements faster, a one cent higher street car fare would bring in 10 million dollars a year more," Collins said.

Both speakers insisted that two large groups of investment bankers have offered in writing to buy the securities with interest rates not specified.

"Our estimates are based on 3 per cent interest," Harrington said. "Cleveland began its system with a 3½ per cent rate, but a few years later refunded at 1½ per cent. There is no doubt but that after a few years of experience we would take advantage of provisions permitting refunding at lower rates."

Desirable, He Says.

Rep. Monroe [D., Collinsville] wanted to know what plans have been made about taking the profitable Chicago Motor Coach company into the traction authority.

"Personally, my opinion is that it would be desirable," Harrington said. "Of course, that company is not in receivership and would have to be dealt with accordingly."

The senators indicated they will insist that the property tax exemption under the plan be recognized as a subsidy of nearly 4 million dollars a year.

Collins and Harrington replied that this cost to tax payers would be more than balanced by higher property values.

DRY'S 'HORSE THIEF' ARTICLE STIRS FURORE

Springfield, Ill., March 13 (Special).—Members of the house liquor relations committee today received an apology from the Rev. R. O. Dexheimer, superintendent of the Illinois Anti-Saloon league, for an article in the league's magazine that was construed by the legislators as cailing some of them "horse thieves."

"I was reared in the west, where, in the early days, 50 years or more ago, we had horse thieves and cattle rustlers to contend with," Dexheimer's article said in criticizing the liquor committee. "Do you think for one moment that my father would have allowed a bunch of horse thieves to sit in the jury box to try horse thieves and cattle rustlers? Not on your life!"

Angry members brandished the article at Dexheimer in the committee hearing. He said he didn't mean to intimate that they were "horse thieves."

An amendment to the liquor laws providing that liquor may not be sold within 100 feet of a church was recommended by the committee so as to exempt taverns established before a church was built. A bill to outlaw local option elections until a year after the war ends was termed dead by Dexheimer. Even the bill's sponsors said it had no chance of passage.

150,000 INCOME TAX REPORTS RECEIVED AS DEADLINE NEARS

The peak period of the income tax payment rush was reached in the office of Nigel D. Campbell, collector of internal revenue, in the United States courthouse yesterday. Midnight tomorrow is the deadline for mailing returns.

Weary mailmen dumped more than 150,000 pieces of mail into Campbell's office during the day. More than 400 girl employes were busy there sorting and opening mail and removing checks. The mail included estimates of 1945 income and payments on income tax for 1943 carried over from last year, both of which also must be made by midnight tomorrow.

Federal tax returns must be filed by all persons whose 1944 income was $500 or more and by those with less income desiring to apply for a refund. The estimates of 1945 income must be filed by all persons who expect to receive more than $5,000 during the year.

STATE AID FEARS PAROLE RULING MAY FREE MANY

Automatic release of many convicts serving time as parole violators in Illinois penitentiaries would be required under an opinion handed down yesterday by Judge Elwyn R. Shaw in federal District court. Hector Brouillet, assistant Illinois attorney general, said last night. He predicted that steps would be taken to appeal the decision.

Judge Shaw's opinion, given in support of his release last week of a Negro convict, James Howard, on a writ of habeas corpus, held, in effect, that parole violators may not be compelled to serve unexpired portions of their sentences after the date upon which the original sentence would have terminated had there been no parole.

In so ruling, Judge Shaw took direct issue with the position of the Illinois Supreme court.

COUNCIL O. K.'S CITY PROPOSAL TO BUY SLUMS

A few minutes before he left the council meeting to catch a train for Springfield, Mayor Kelly was authorized yesterday by the city council to seek state legislation to empower the city to purchase land in blighted neighborhoods for private or public housing reconstruction.

The city proposes to issue five million dollars' worth of bonds and to ask the state for a grant of an additional five millions for buying and razing blighted properties. After being cleared, the land would be sold to private construction companies or to the public housing administratior for rebuilding .new dwelling units.

Master Plan Approved.

The Chicago plan commission's master 25 year plan for residential land use was approved by the council on the recommendation of Ald. Lindell [9th], chairman of the housing committee. This plan, based on an anticipated population of 3,800,000 in 1965, provides for the razing of 345,000 undesirable dwelling units and the erection of 500,000 new units.

Mayor Kelly's appointments to the Chicago plan commission of Joseph J. Cavanagh, vice president of the Chicago Motor club; Martin Kennelly, chairman of the Red Cross war fund, and John A. Holabird, an architect, were confirmed by the council. Their terms will expire Jan. 11, 1949.

Licensing Bills Recommended.

A vote of disapproval was given bills pending in the state legislature which would call for the election of members of the board of education and the Chicago park district, now appointed by the mayor. The council recommended the passage o other legislative bills which would give the city the power to license drug stores, currency exchanges, and second hand stores.

Ald. Emil V. Pacini [10th], who was elected March 5, and Aldermen Hogan [6th] and Bieszczat [26th], also recently elected to fill vacancies, were appointed to committees. Pacini was appointed to the committees on aviation; building and zoning; compensation; harbors, wharves, and bridges; housing; labor and industrial relations; licenses, and local transportation.

Hogan was appointed to the following committees: Aviation; housing; labor; licenses; local industries; transportation; police and municipal institutions; and railroad terminals. Bieszczat's committee assignments: Compensation; consolidation, reorganization, and taxation; harbors; health; judiciary and state legislation; licenses; transportation; railroad terminals, and housing.

Lancaster [37th] to building and finance; Ald. Brody [39th] to building and local industries; Ald. Wagner [14th] to special assessments and finance; Aldermen Merryman [45th] and De Priest [3d] to finance; Ald. Sheridan [16th] to local transportation and utilities; Ald. THEY CALL IT THE "MILK BILL" WHEN IT'S BUTTER 'N' EGGS BESIDES

DO YOU DO THAT?

Bud Bowman

IT'S MIGHTY CONVENIENT as most people know, to have milk 'n' cream 'n' eggs 'n' butter 'n' cottage cheese delivered right to the door. And when milk costs a little more delivered like this . . . well, most folks say it oughta.

BUT WHEN THE BILL COMES IN, some women say their darling husbands bellow like gentleman cows . . . "Our milk bill is too high" or "We spend too much for milk." Forgetting that th' milkman's bill is for milk and all the other dairy foods he has left at their house.

THEY'RE ALL VALUABLE FOODS for keeping the family healthy. But the one that's the biggest bargain in food values—the one that the kids need the most—is milk. Its price (Bowman Milk of Superior Flavor, 16½¢ delivered, or 14½¢ a quart at the stores) still leaves it the best-for-the-money of any food you buy.

FAMILY ARGUMENTS on this important subject shouldn't happen . . . when everybody understands the facts. That's why I hope husbands are reading this, as well as wives.

BIPARTISAN SCHOOL BOARD BILL REJECTED

Democrats Turn Out to Urge Its Defeat.

BY ROBERT HOWARD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., March 13.—The bill by Rep. Armstrong [R., Chicago] for the direct election of the Chicago board of education was disapproved today by the house committee on education, which recommended its defeat on a 12 to 10 roll call.

Rep. Armstrong.

"This is an effort to get a bipartisan board and to place school affairs closer to the people," said Armstrong. "No matter how the districts would be aligned, it would be impossible for all members to be from one political party."

Mayor Kelly now appoints the school board members, whose conduct of educational affairs in Chicago was criticized at a hearing last week. The Armstrong bill would divide the city into five districts, with each electing two members. An eleventh member would be elected from the city at large.

Democrats Turn Out.

Democratic members turned out in full force for the educational committee meeting and outvoted Republican supporters of Armstrong.

The house adopted amendments, agreed to by agricultural spokesmen, under which downstate cities could not issue bonds under the proposed airport authority act before July 1, 1947, unless the federal government furnished a grant equal to 25 per cent of the entire cost.

The effect of the amendments, their sponsors said, is that for the next two years the airport authorities could only be created in the larger downstate cities. Springfield, Danville, Rockford, and Freeport plan construction of airports with bonds to be issued and taxes levied by authorities.

Regret that expenditures of the federal government had not been limited at the start of the Roosevelt administration was expressed today in the house of representatives. Members took the view that costs of the war now make it impossible to put a 25 per cent ceiling on income tax rates.

The house adopted a resolution, 93 to 39, by Rep. Kaindl [D., Chicago] to rescind the legislature's 1943 action of indorsing the proposed 23d constitutional amendment for a federal limit on income taxes. Kaindl's resolution was sent to the senate.

Little Man Suffers.

"We voted this resolution two years ago in the belief that drastic action must be taken to stop squandering of taxpayers' funds by the Roosevelt administration," said Rep. Armstrong, the original sponsor of the limitation. "Burocrats are putting the government in business to such an extent that business is being put out of business, with the result that the little man is being forced to pay the bulk of the taxes."

Rep. Harris [R., Lincoln, majority floor leader, pointed out that the local governments in Illinois have constitutional and statutory limits on the debts they can pile up and the taxes they can levy. Some such federal limitation, he continued, would have saved billions had it been in effect as a check on the Roosevelt administration squandering in boondoggling. Republicans did not make a party issue of the resolution however, and many of them joined the Democrats in support of Kaindl, who argued that an attempt to tie the hands of the federal government now might make it difficult to retire war bond issues and meet obligations to veterans under the G. I. Bill of Rights.

17 States Indorsed Move.

Legislatures of 17 states have indorsed the 25 per cent tax limit, Kaindl said, altho three of them have rescinded the action. Should 32 states approve the plan it would be mandatory for congress to propose the constitutional amendment.

Polling places would be kept open until 7 p. m., two hours later than the present law, for general elections under a bill recommended for passage by the house elections committee. The present voting hours of 6 a. m. to 5 p. m. would be retained for municipal elections. The bill was sponsored by Representatives Monroe [D., Collinsville] and Keller [R., Waukegan].

'Ideal' White Collar Girls

Three girl secretaries, selected as "ideal white collar girls" in a poll of the membership of the White Collar and Professional War Time Legislative conference on the basis of their contributions to the war effort as well as for their beauty, will participate in a meeting of the conference Sunday in Moose hall, 1018 N. Dearborn st.

The winners are Jean Renk, 21, of 218 Hyde Park av., Bellwood, secretary in the labor section, war finance division, United States treasury department; Rosemary Henry, 21, of 1001 N. Dearborn st., a secretary at the Federal Reserve bank, and Margaret Fox, 25, of 5354 Agatite av., a secretary at the Brett Machinery company.

The winners have all donated blood more than once to the Red Cross and are buying bonds on the pay roll deduction plan.

The WCPWLC is made up of white collar workers, labor union members, and professional and small business people. At Sunday's meeting war time and post-war legislation will be discussed, Mollie Levitas, president of local 20,732 of the AFL Office Employes' union, said yesterday.

DENIAL OF WARD DISMISSAL PLEA URGED BY U. S.

Calls Move Attempt to Grab Advantage.

The government yesterday asked the Circuit Court of Appeals to deny a motion filed Monday by attorneys for Montgomery Ward & Co. for dismissal of the government's appeal from the ruling of Judge Philip L. Sullivan in federal District court that the army seizure of Ward properties was illegal.

The company had asked dismissal on the ground that the government failed to file its brief within 20 days of the filing of the transcript, as required under court rules.

The government's answer concedes that the court, under its own rules, has the right to dismiss the appeal on technical grounds, but asserts that the court, in its discretion, also may consent to hear the appeal despite the government's dereliction.

Earlier Promptitude Cited.

In support of this thesis the answer recites the promptitude with which the government took preliminary steps looking to an appeal, including the filing of the transcript, and of its prompt action in asking the Supreme court to take the case on a writ of certiorari. The Supreme court Monday refused to do so.

The answer points out that under court rules the government had three months in which to file notice of appeal and 40 additional days in which to docket the case.

The answer characterizes Ward's motion for dismissal as an attempt "to take frivolous advantage of the government's zealousness in seeking to expedite the appeal."

Asks Hearing April 5 or 6.

Joined to the answer is a motion asking the court to set dates for the filing of briefs. The motion says that the government is prepared to file its brief by March 26. It asks the court to set a hearing for April 5 or 6. This would give Ward's attorneys only 10 or 11 days in which to answer the government's brief.

The answer was filed at 5:40 p. m. The clerk's office remained open after hours to permit the filing of the answer one day after the filing of the motion to dismiss.

ASSAILS LA GUARDIA FOR TIPOFF WHICH JAILED ILL VETERAN

New York, March 13 [Special].—The New York city council today was asked by a member to censure Mayor Fiorello La Guardia for injecting himself into the case of Chief Pharmacist's Mate Frederick Brooks, war shocked battle veteran recently cleared by the navy of seducing a girl in Italy after being detained in navy custody.

Councilman Hugh Quinn, Queens Democrat, introduced a resolution charging that the mayor, who communicated with the girl's father and reported to the navy department, "took it upon himself to act as judge and jury in a matter concerning which he had no authority or knowledge," and had by inference assumed Brooks guilty "of a heinous charge without granting him the benefit of a hearing." The resolution, which was referred to the committee on rules, proposed that the council request the mayor to make adequate apologies to Brooks.

Meantime Brooks and his 19 year old wife, who had vainly sought help from La Guardia, were enjoying a reunion at St. Alban's Naval hospital, where the petty officer is being treated for battle fatigue. Brooks denied the seduction charge.

HOUSE VOTES ANOTHER YEAR TO LEND-LEASE

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—The house voted overwhelmingly today to give another year's life to the lend-lease program but restricted the agency to war time use only.

It wrote into the act a prohibition against using lend-lease in any post-war relief, reconstruction or rehabilitation programs, then voted 35 to 28 to renew the program which administrationists called the No. 1 economic weapon of the allies.

The extension bill now goes to the senate. Without its enactment, lend-lease would expire June 30. The renewal gives it life to June 30, 1946, and legalizes lend-lease contracts running to June 30, 1949.

Calls F. D. R. "Spendthrift."

Only a handful of members spoke against the bill, and most of them struck at administration spending policies in general, rather than at the lend-lease program in particular.

Rep. Rich [R., Pa.] touched off a round of debate when he called President Roosevelt "a spendthrift" who "doesn't know the value of a dollar, never did and never will."

"I resent the inference that the President doesn't have the welfare of this nation at heart," protested Rep. Flood [D., Pa.], to which Rep. Savage [D., Wash.] echoed:

"The millions who voted for President Roosevelt to carry on the war program voted their confidence in his ability."

Rich offered an amendment which would have required the President to obtain congressional approval for lend-lease settlements but it was voted down.

Republicans Win Changes.

The bill as it passed the house represented a compromise to erase Republican expressed fears that the administration would ease lend-lease into the post-war era, using it to make agreements for relief and reconstruction in liberated areas.

The administration agreed to an amendment which says the act does not "authorize the President to enter into or carry out any contract or agreement with a foreign government for post-war relief, post-war rehabilitation or post-war reconstruction" except for items specifically intended for defense or combat.

Bringing the bill to the floor for its third war time renewal, Rep. Luther Johnson [D., Tex.] called lend-lease "the greatest war measure" and declared "it has brought us as close to victory as we now are."

Hits Lend-Lease Abuse.

Rep. Knutson [R., Minn.], a member of the tax writing ways and means committee, raised one of the few voices of protest against past lend-lease administration.

"Lend-lease has done much good," he said, "but also it has been badly abused." At one point he chided:

"You can go into Canada and get all the meat you want and get it without points. The reason is that the British like their beef with a lend-lease flavor—and cornfed from this country."

"I just thought of something else, dear! Can't you deduct that $6.45 you lost in that poker game last November?"

ARMY SHIELDS OFFICERS' PAST IN RED INQUIRY

Stimson Refuses to Divulge Records.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 13.—The congressional inquiry into communism in the army received a setback today when Secretary of War Stimson forbade disclosure of the loyalty records of commissioned officers before they entered the army.

Maj. Gen. Clayton Bissell, head of the army's intelligence corps, handed a sealed letter from Stimson to Chairman Thomason [D., Tex.] of a house military affairs subcommittee, when asked to furnish the records in support of his assertion that no army officer ever had advocated overthrow of the government by violence, a tenet of the Communist party.

"Confidential" Records.

The letter, read aloud by Thomason, stated that investigations of the loyalty of officers in civilian life were "confidential and for the use of the secretary of war and his staff."

"The files contain confidential documents of the executive branch of the government," Stimson wrote, "and it would be against the public interest to disclose them in a public hearing. They involve military relationship with our allies. This decision is solely for the purpose of protecting military intelligence."

Gen. Bissell was questioned at length but steadfastly refused to testify on this phase, remarking at one point:

"I'm an officer of the army and my duty is to carry out the instructions of my chief, the secretary of war."

Donovan Questioned.

Maj. Gen. William J. [Wild Bill] Donovan, director of the office of strategic services, the secret intelligence agency of the chiefs of staff of the army and navy, was also questioned.

Four of 10 officers listed with communistic affiliations are in the OSS. Gen. Donovan said he knew these men personally as well as two civilian employes in the agency accused of communism.

"I never took in a man about whom I had any doubt," he told the subcommittee.

The subcommittee's investigation was prompted by publication of a war department directive dated Dec. 30, 1944, which removed previous bans to the commissioning of Communists. The sole test to be applied, commanding officers were instructed, was whether loyalty to the United States was superior to any other loyalty.

Names of 10 Officers.

Gen. Bissell testified Feb. 28 that he knew of no Communist who had received a commission. The names of 10 officers, admitted members of the Communist party or with extensive communistic connections, were then published by THE TRIBUNE.

The witness gave the military records of each of the 10 men. They were Maj. Edward Newhouse, 1st Lieutenants Richard L. Criley, Irving Goff, Richard Kenney, Vincent Lossowski, Harry Schoenberg, and Isadore A. Trauber, and 2d Lieutenants Gerald Cook, Irving Fajans, and Milton Wolf.

Eight of the 10 officers have seen overseas service and three have been wounded, receiving the Purple Heart, Gen. Bissell said.

"Each has sworn loyalty to the United Staes and this record indicates that they have kept that oath," he declared. "Instead of advocating the overthrow of the government by force and violence, they are engaged in upholding it by force and violence.

Substantial Change.

"However, I want to emphasize that the war department is ready to reëxamine any case and any substantial charge will be investigated."

In the cases of several of the men, commissions were withheld from 14 to 17 months, Gen. Bissell said, while their loyalty was being investigated.

Rep. Elston [R., O.] asked if there was any detail in the newspaper stories which the witness could point to as untrue. Gen. Bissell said the allegations of communism were untrue because army investigators had finally exonerated all the officers of charges they believed in the overthrow of the government by violence.

"In the case of Maj. Newhouse, a member of Gen. Arnold's staff, it was stated that he openly admitted he was a member of the Communist party," said Elston. "And the attorney general has ruled that a Communist advocates overthrow of the government by violence. Did you investigate that?"

The witness referred to Secretary Stimson's letter as authority for refusal to answer. The questioning continued:

ELSTON: We just must take your word for it? You're not willing to submit the records of persons commissioned in the United States army for our perusal?

BISSELL: Your question was anticipated and the secretary of war gave me that letter. I must decline to disclose the files.

ELSTON: What records are then available?

BISSELL: Their records since they entered the service.

REP. ROE [D., N. Y.]: Those are absolutely useless for this inquiry.

ELSTON: You say the charges are untrue and yet you won't give us the evidence upon which you base that statement. Can't you even tell us if any of these 10 officers ever belonged to the Communist party?

Useless for Inquiry.

BISSELL: No, sir. The army is not responsible for the activities of civilians before they enter the service except as it affects their present loyalty and their present loyalty is the basic test.

ELSTON: Could a Communist be loyal since, under the definition of the attorney general, he believed in overthrow of our government? Would you commission any man who has ever believed in that?

BISSELL: If he is proved loyal to the United States now, he'd be eligible for consideration. If we had proof of his communism, we'd look a long time at him.

Gen. Donovan said that David Zablodowski, senior economic editor of the OSS, and Lt. Alexander Vuchinich, now stationed in Yugoslavia, were subordinates personally known to him. He said he was personally satisfied they were loyal.

Wouldn't Be Safe.

"I understand that overthrow of the government by violence is not advocated by Communists today," he remarked.

"Would you want any one in your organization who believed in that?" he was asked.

"No, it wouldn't be safe," the witness conceded.

Rep. Arends [R., Ill.], read into the record a copy of a telegram being sent thruout the nation to leading educators, church dignitaries, and prominent civilians which urged signing of a statement supporting the new war department policy on Communists.

"The telegram asked for replies to a room at 205 E. 42d street, New York City," he added. "Investigation discloses that as the address of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, an organization labeled subversive and communistic by the attorney general."

HEARINGS OPEN SOON ON U. S. WIRE SYSTEMS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 13.—The senate interstate commerce committee will open public hearings March 19 to study American international communications systems, Sen. McFarland [D., Nev.], a member of the committee, announced today. The hearings will assist the senate in helping to form an American post-war communications policy.

Secretary of the Navy Forrestal will be the first witness and will be followed by Rear Adm. Joseph R. Redman, chief of navy communication. Representatives of the war and state departments, the federal communications commission, and possibly the civil aeronautics board also will be heard.

Discussions have been held recently among government departments on means of preserving American interests in communications systems built during the war in foreign countries with American money. Some officials, it is understood, have considered the creation of a merged company which would have a monopoly in communications originating in this country, but the attitude of the senate interstate commerce committee on the matter has not been expressed.

GRAND-DADDY OF 'EM ALL!

and a magnificent thing to behold

October 10, 1848, was a great day in Chicago, for it was then that the brig "Buffalo" came into port with Chicago's first railway locomotive, the "Pioneer," on board

True, it was a second-hand locomotive, though in excellent condition. Its one pair of driving wheels were directly under the cab; and its 10"-diameter cylinders tilted slightly rearward—the fashion of the day.

It was a magnificent thing to behold! And less than a month later, on its official run, many of Chicago's "Who's Who" made a short run west. There were directors, stockholders, business men and editors—the west's first passengers—who sat on seats fitted hastily into a couple of work cars to experience a new speed thrill.

Thus it was that Chicago and North Western became a living, moving reality.

Many years have passed since that first locomotive—the old "Pioneer"—went into honorable retirement, to be succeeded by ever larger and more powerful locomotives. Today's mighty power plants are busy "keeping 'em rollin'" toward final victory. When you travel only when it is absolutely essential you help in this vital work. In the peace days to come, with its postwar plans finding expression in new and even finer equipment, "North Western" will continue to serve—and serve well—the shippers and travelers of America.

G.M. CHARGES CIO SMEAR ATTACKS BY UNION PAPERS

Company Appeals Against Them Ignored.

Detroit, Mich., March 13 [Special].—A smear campaign is being waged against General Motors corporation by publications of the CIO United Automobile Workers, H. W. Anderson, vice president in charge of General Motors personnel, today told a senate war investigation committee which is studying war production in the Detroit area.

H. W. Anderson.

"General Motors has become increasingly concerned," Anderson testified, "over the scurrilous attacks being leveled against members of management and even workers by many official publications of local unions.

"Twice, General Motors has made formal demands upon international officers of the union to incorporate changes in our agreement which would aid in controling these unwarranted attacks.

Attacks Unabated.

"On both occasions these international officers, who tell us they agree that such attacks are not conducive to good collective bargaining relations, have promised to take the necessary action.

"I am sorry to say, however, that despite these assurances, the malicious and false accusations vilifying management continue unabated in intensity to this day."

Anderson branded as "untrue and wholly unfounded" a charge made Saturday by R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO, that industry is trying to use the war period as a means to weaken unions.

"It is untrue and wholly unfounded in fact," Anderson said, "both as it applies to our present policies and our post-war thinking."

Decentralize Authority.

Last Saturday Walter P. Reuther, UAW-CIO vice president, said his basic fight was to get the corporation to decentralize authority on labor relations matters. He said General Motors has a top policy committee which sits in New York completely away from the practical aspects of labor relations.

"Labor relations matters in General Motors," Anderson explained, "are discussed at meetings of the personnel policy committee which are held in Detroit.

"As a matter of fact, the procedure for establishing personnel policies in General Motors is not nearly as formalized as in the international union, UAW-CIO, where the mandates of the annual convention are binding for one year upon all international and local officers of the union.

Binding on All Officials.

"Between these annual conventions the international executive board forms the policy making group in the UAW-CIO and its policies are binding upon all international and local officials of the union.

"On a number of occasions General Motors has approached the UAW-CIO with proposals for changes in our agreements to meet war time conditions in which Mr. Reuther has admitted his hands were tied because of mandates laid down by the UAW-CIO convention or of the parent CIO itself."

The committee interrupted Anderson's testimony to delve into operations and working conditions in forge plants and foundries in the Detroit area.

William Scott, manager of the Chevrolet Detroit forge plant, said men at his plant, altho on piece work, invariably ceased activities after they made $18 because "they consider that a day's work." He denied a labor charge that a large amount of unused capacity existed in the plant for making heavy shells.

R. I. Roberge, in charge of government contracts at the Ford Motor company, was questioned by Sen. Mead [D., N. Y.] regarding unused capacity in a Ford factory. The senator asked him: "Have you informed proper governmental authorities that idle capacity was available in your plant?"

2 FOUND GUILTY IN 50,000 BOGUS GAS STAMP DEAL

Sam Beer, 41, operator of the Boul Mich tavern, 506 N. Michigan av., and Joe Leight, 40, of 114 N. Hamlin av., a cigar salesman, were found guilty yesterday by Federal Judge Michael L. Igoe on conspiracy charges of illegally possessing and transferring 50,000 counterfeit gasoline ration coupons. Ralph Adamczyk, 25, former Cudahy [Wis.] butcher shop owner, and Sam Brancato, 32, of 1851 Burling st., had pleaded guilty earlier to the same indictment. A fifth defendant under the indictment, Philip Henry Packer, 45, of 5340 Sheridan rd., pool room operator, was dismissed.

DAY by DAY on the FARM by GAIL COMPTON

March 13, 1945.

BECAUSE of an excellent winter, conditions are favorable for an early start in field work this spring at the farm. Last fall was "open," and the manager was able to get 80 acres plowed at the Wheaton farm. Now he does not expect to have any spring plowing, because the big field tilling machine, which plows, disks, and harrows in one operation, will be used to prepare the old corn ground for oats.

The main job now is getting out a large accumulation of manure. Usually, this job is done thru the winter, but snows this year were so heavy and persistent the men were unable to move the manure. Now it is piled four and five feet deep in the cattle barns. Every day the ground will hold the spreader and tractor the valuable soil builder is moving out.

Plant Nutriment Held.

Altho the workers have been inconvenienced by not being able to spread manure during the winter, the farm has benefitted. When manure is allowed to build up in a barn and is packed down, there is little loss of plant nutriment thru leaching and decay. Loosely piled manure outside a barn will lose as much as 60 per cent of its fertilizing value thru leaching.

A ton of manure is worth approximately $3. This is based on the application of eight tons per acre every four years. Thus, when manure is not handled properly, the financial loss is considerable. The best way to handle manure is to spread it on the fields as soon as it is gathered. When done in the winter, however, there will be some loss thru surface drainage and erosion.

Practical Way to Fertilize.

The most practical method of applying manure is to permit the animals to do the job. Feeding out cattle on pasture solves the problems of gathering and spreading, and also prevents normal nutrient losses. This summer a load of farm grown Angus steer calves will be fed on pasture to compare the results with the feedlot method. The cost of collecting and spreading manure is estimated at $1 a ton, so this will be a saving to credit against the cost of pasture feeding.

The number of potential Persian lamb coats is on the increase with the birth of another Karakul lamb. The latest addition is the result of an inadvertent cross between a Karakul buck and a Southdown ewe. One bewildered ewe has twins, which are black as coal. The mother seems to realize something is wrong, for she keeps her lambs away from the others as if the twins were social outcasts.

The GARDEN by Ben Markland

TWO varieties of tomato seeds [Crimson Cushion and John Baer] were planted in flats in the farm greenhouse on March 6, and an additional flat of a third variety, Fordhook hybrid, was planted yesterday. This is the first variety of hybrid tomatoes ever placed on the general market, and the farm gardener is anxious to test its flavor and yield in comparison with old farm favorites.

Fordhook hybrid, its developers say, is wilt-resistant, has uniformly shaped smooth fruits, and bears within 60 days after transplanting.

The fruits are scarlet red, of medium size [about five ounces], and mildly acid sweet in flavor. The variety produced a high yield last season on field tests in Pennsylvania.

BOY KILLS DAD TO SAVE MOTHER FROM BEATING

Phoenix, Ariz., March 13 (AP).—Murel Cox, 14, 7th grade student, sobbingly told Deputy County Atty. Thomas J. Croaff that he shot and killed his father today because he didn't want his mother "abused."

The father, Mitchell Cox, 44, pool hall operator, staggered from the house and fell dead in the yard.

"I love my mother and I didn't know what he was going to do to her," Croaff quoted the boy as saying. "My mother had gone some place in the car and he didn't like it. I saw him hit her. He knocked her down by the ice box in the kitchen. I said 'don't daddy,' and ran and got the gun. Then before I shot I yelled 'don't daddy' again."

FALA BECOMES A FATHER; IT'S TWIN DAUGHTERS

Rhinebeck, N. Y., March 13 (AP).—Fala is the father of twins. Dr. Thomas Sheldon, a veterinarian, today announced two daughters were born March 9 at the Sheldon Canine hospital to President Roosevelt's Scottie and Buttons, owned by Miss Margaret Suckley, who is in charge of Dutchess county archives in the Roosevelt library at Hyde Park.

Fala's daughters, named Meggy and Peggy, were sent home with their mother yesterday, Dr. Sheldon said. Fala visited Rhinebeck two weeks, starting Dec. 29. Altho Dr. Sheldon declined to comment, it is reported Fala's paternity was the result of artificial insemination.

The White House temporarily banned any pictures of the puppies. News camera men were told the pups hardly had their eyes opened yet.

Miss Suckley, who was co-author with Alice Daigliesh of "The True Story of Fala," published in 1942, confirmed Fala's parenthood.

PRESIDENT ASKS 'BOLD' VIEWS ON ECONOMIC ISSUES

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—With Prime Minister MacKenzie King at his side, President Roosevelt said today that he and the Canadian executive had agreed that international post-war economic problems must be solved along "bold and expansive lines." Mr. Roosevelt read to a news conference a statement which said that during King's visit here they had considered "questions of general international interest" as well as relations between the two countries—relations "as firm and friendly as ever."

Smoother Going in 4TH War-Winter

"Charge it." These are good words to say when your battery growls at its tough winter job. But better still, have your Standard Oil Dealer check yours regularly so it's always in tip-top shape, fully charged for efficient service.

Remember, when straining orange juice, how pulp clogs the strainer? That's a good picture of what happens in a car. The oil filter strains the oil . . . deposits build up . . . clog the filter. Then the oil won't go through the filter. Better have it serviced when you change oil.

Pop says: "Blindfold games may be fun at a party, but I can't figure out fellows who drive that way, with windshield wipers on the blink." Pop's right. Better have your Standard Oil Dealer make sure your windshield wiper is ship-shape for winter driving now.

"Fits like an old shoe." Car parts fit like that today. They've lost their "new car fit." That makes it hard to keep lubricants where they belong, where they prevent metal-to-metal contact. Have your Standard Oil Dealer lubricate your car every 60 days, or at 1000 miles—whichever comes first.

Add up all the years of experience of Standard Oil Dealers and you'll get a figure many times the age of the Pyramids. But we wanted to improve even on that. So we ran dealer schools and car clinics. That's why we can say, "For Better Car Care, see your Standard Oil Dealer."

CIVILIANS FACE NEW MEAT LOSS; FIGHT IS RAGING

'Commitments' to Other Nations Cited.

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—A war food administration move to halt shipments of meats to Great Britain and liberated areas and to trim military demands has precipitated an inter-agency controversy that President Roosevelt may be called upon to settle, it was learned today.

Important because of its possible impact on international relations and upon home front psychology, the issue is fundamentally whether civilian food supplies should be reduced further to meet international commitments and obligations.

Demand Greater Than Supply.

With food production now on the downgrade, total demands being made upon this country are considerably greater than the supply.

While the interagency controversy over meat was being made public, Sen. Eastland [D., Miss.] told the senate today that practically all the nation's entire salt pork supply "has been earmarked and shipped to Russia."

Eastland declared that "certainly Russia cannot have less meat than we have in the south, because we have none."

The meat issue came to a head late last week in a WFA effort to allocate supplies for the April-June quarter among various claimant groups—the military, civilians, lend-lease, foreign relief, and other export demands.

Feared Greater Civilian Shortage.

In the case of meats, War Food Administrator Jones proposed to take Great Britain and liberated areas off the receiving list during the three month period and to cut military supplies below army requests. This action was described as necessary if civilian shortages were not to be aggravated.

Agencies representing foreign claimants—the foreign economic administration and the state department—protested. So did the army. At a meeting with Jones, army officials threatened to take the matter to the White House.

Jones rushed to War Mobilizer Byrnes for support. The latter took no side in the matter, but set up a special committee to pass upon foreign shipments of food. The committee, headed by Foreign Economic Administrator Crowley, is, in effect, a super food allocations committee.

Scant Hope of Agreement.

Represented on this committee are the same agencies which have representatives on a food allocations committee which has been functioning under Jones. At WFA there was little hope that the new committee would meet with any greater success in dividing up the food supply than did the Jones committee.

Agencies urging the foreign commitments expressed fear that failure to meet them might have far reaching repercussions in London and other foreign capitals and weaken this country's influence at the forthcoming San Francisco world security conference.

The United States has allocated to lend-lease countries [principally Great Britain and Russia] 605,000,000 pounds of meat, mostly pork, for the current quarter.

WFA officials said that if meat continued to be shipped to Great Britain and liberated areas during the April-June quarter, the per capita civilian supply might drop to around 116 pounds. Civilians are now supposed to be getting about 128 pounds.

The suggestion that shipments to Great Britain be halted during the coming quarter was made, WFA officials said, because that country has accumulated much larger than normal reserves and would continue to receive supplies from Argentina.

EVERY BUILDING IS ASKED TO AID IN PAPER DRIVE

The Chicago waste paper salvage committee expects every building in Chicago and surrounding communities to have a large bundle of paper on the curb April 28, John R. Robinson, chairman of the committee, said yesterday.

Robinson said that buildings expected to coöperate in the drive include hotels and apartment buildings which normally sell their waste paper to dealers.

Plans for the curb collection were formulated yesterday at a luncheon of the salvage committee in the Morrison hotel.

RELAX CURFEW FOR CAFES NEAR WAR INDUSTRIES

Latest Order Called Some Relief.

War Mobilization Director Byrnes modified the much changed curfew yesterday to grant restaurants "patronized primarily by war workers in plants in the surrounding area" the right to apply for exemption from the midnight closing order.

The latest order is expected to result in relief for swing shift war workers and persons engaged in other essential activities who have protested against the closing of restaurants where they are accustomed to eat after work. More than 200 restaurants in Chicago are ordinarily open until 1 or 2 a. m., and a large number of them are expected to apply for exemption from the curfew.

Applies to "Essential" List.

Control of the exemptions here will be held by Lester Brown, WMC area director, said William H. Spencer, regional director for the WMC. Spencer said that despite the wording of the order, the ruling would be construed to apply to restaurants serving workers in all industries on the WMC "essential" list, as well as workers in actual war plants.

The only automatic exemption, however, still is for restaurants customarily open all night. An applicant for exemption must file a written request with Brown, specifying the period he wishes to remain open after midnight.

Called Some Relief.

With the application must be filed a statement by workers or managements of war plants in the area stating, among other things, that in-plant feeding facilities are inadequate. Finally, the police or "similar public officials" must file a written report that the restaurant was open prior to the curfew for the hours applied for, and that it has been patronized primarily by war workers.

Restaurants granted such exemptions would not be permitted to sell intoxicants.

WAR PRISONERS TO EAT OLEO, FISH, TOO, NOW

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—Prisoners of war, like civilians, now will eat substitutes for butter, meat, chicken, and other foods that are scarce.

Revision of menus for prisoners in this country and overseas has been ordered by the army service forces, it was learned, as a result of reports indicating that the meat supply and other food reserves are rapidly being exhausted.

Lt. Gen. Somervell, chief of the ASF, directed commanders of prison camps to "make every effort" to put on prisoner of war menus such substitute foods as oleomargarine, salted fish, eggs, spaghetti, marcaroni, beans and cold meat cuts.

BOWLES SEEKING LID ON HAIRCUT AND FILM PRICES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 13.—Price Administrator Bowles said today he is seeking legislation which will enable the office of price administration to put a ceiling upon or reduce, motion picture and other public amusement admission prices. He also announced at a news conference that he wants congressional authority to control barber shop and beauty parlor prices, and indicated that ceilings on commercial rents are in prospect.

Bowles said movie prices are an important item in the average family's budget, with 1½ billion dollars spent on admissions last year. He said movie admissions have risen an "extraordinary" amount since the war, and that in the absence of control there is no assurance that the inflated prices will return to previous levels or will not go higher. From June, 1941, to last December, admissions rose 38½ per cent, of which less than one-third was caused by higher federal excise taxes, he reported.

Might Cut Prices.

Bowles said if congress gives him the authority, his first move will be to make certain that movie admissions go no higher. Prices might be reduced, he said. The OPA is seeking legislation broad enough to enable the OPA to control also admissions to theaters, concerts, opera, and baseball and football games, if such control should become necessary, he said.

Bowles made public a letter he wrote to Sen. Wagner [D., N. Y.] in which he outlined the sharp increases in motion picture and beauty and barber shop prices. Bowles wrote that if the OPA is given authority to control movie admissions, the extra work involved would not be large because complete information is available thru the bureau of internal revenue in connection with admission taxes.

Explains Rent Problem.

Prices of barber and beauty shop services advanced 29 and 40 per cent, respectively, from May, 1942, to last November, and were responsible for about 5 per cent of the over-all increase in living costs during that period, Bowles told Wagner.

Bowles disclosed that the OPA is working on the problem of rising commercial rents and asserted that this type of rent must be controled. So far, he said, the many stores and offices vacated by the 200,000 men who have left the retail field for the army and navy have helped to curb the increases in commercial rents.

Murray Humphreys Freed on Habeas Corpus Writ

Murray [The Camel] Humphreys, 42, of 7710 Bennett av., former Capone lieutenant who says he is in the oil business, was arrested "on general principles" yesterday when Detectives Joseph Bartush and Arthur Hoff found him at Clark and Randolph sts. A few hours later he was ordered released by Judge Harold G. Ward, before whom he appeared on a writ of habeas corpus obtained by his attorney, Emmett Moynihan.

INVALID COMMITS SUICIDE.

Benjamin D. Libke, 62, of 1604 Otto blvd., Chicago Heights, an invalid for several years, committed suicide yesterday, police said, by holding a shotgun barrel in his mouth and touching the trigger with a cane.

Things aren't always the way we want them nowadays. Sometimes your dealer is out of cigarettes. A choice cut of meat is not to be had, or you find it necessary to do without that new tire a while longer.

It's that way with your street car and bus service, too. Although 16,000 of your neighbors, who operate Chicago Surface Lines, are doing everything humanly possible to have transportation where you want it, when you want it, conditions often interfere.

Upwards of 4,000,000 riders daily step on and off Surface Lines buses and street cars as Chicago moves back and forth to its essential jobs. Thousands of these riders are former motorists caught short by gas rationing. Others travel to war plants located in sections where none used to exist.

To care for such increased demand naturally means added responsibilities for Surface Lines employees. Right now many of your neighbors in CSL uniforms are giving up days of rest and working extra hours other days so street cars and buses can keep rolling along more route miles than at any previous time in Chicago's history.

Often these CSL men cannot provide all the service you deserve. That is a condition we all regret. But the street cars and buses are on the job day and night . . . and schedules are as swift and dependable as available manpower permits.

M'NUTT ACCUSED OF PASSING BUCK ON JOB SLASHES

Charged with Failure to Use His Authority.

BY PHILIP DODD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Mar. 13.—Chairman McNutt of the man power commission was accused of being "evasive" and of "passing the buck" today by members of the congressional joint economy committee, before which he had been called to explain why his agency had not brought about reductions in the federal pay roll demanded by the committee.

Under questioning, McNutt insisted he did not have the power to order governmental man power economics. He said what power he had been given under Presidential directives had been delegated by him to the United States civil service commission.

Another development on the capital's man power front was the decision by the house rules committee to approve a resolution under which the house would send the job control bill passed by the senate last week to a house-senate conference. A house vote on the resolution is expected tomorrow.

Man Power Ceilings.

The senate bill would give McNutt power to dictate man power ceilings in every place of employment and to prohibit or regulate the hiring of new workers. The bill is a substitute for the house-passed measure for the drafting of men 18 to 45 who quit war jobs.

McNutt spent an uncomfortable two hours before the economy committee, of which Sen. Byrd [D., Va.], outspoken foe of padded government pay rolls, is chairman. Questions by Byrd and Rep. Knutson [R., Minn.] brought beads of perspiration to McNutt's brow and his ears frequently reddened under the verbal barrage.

Disclaim Authority.

In response to questions by Rep. Taber [D., N. Y.] as to why employment in federal agencies continued to mount, McNutt said he had no authority to control the matter. Only congress, by withholding appropriations, or the budget bureau, by imposing budgetary ceilings, can cut the number of jobs, he said.

In a prepared statement, McNutt predicted there will be only a slight decline in government man power needs after the defeat of Germany and that there would be no drastic changes in the total man power requirements of the nation. He also predicted the continuance of government controls over man power, wages, materials, and prices until both the European and Pacific wars are ended.

Byrd noted that the Presidential order setting up the WMC gave McNutt authority to transfer employes from any government agency to other federal jobs where they are more needed in the war effort.

Existing Agencies.

"That authority has been delegated to the civil service commission," McNutt said. "I always have felt it is best to utilize existing agencies."

"You are being evasive," retorted Knutson. "I'm under the impression you're passing the buck to the civil service commission, the budget bureau, and to congress."

McNutt said his powers were only "persuasive" and that when he detects overstaffing in government bureaus, his only recourse is a request for coöperation. "You'd be surprised what it takes to get coöperation between government agencies," he said.

Arthur S. Flemming, civil service commissioner, who attended today's hearing, told the committee, in response to a question, that 175,000 transfers have been made by the commission. But the vacancies created by transfers are frequently filled again, he said.

Must Meet Requests.

"Do you mean to say that an agency will deliberately fill a vacancy even tho the worker is not needed?" asked Byrd.

"Yes," said Flemming. "The responsibility is on the agency management. If the agency has the appropriations to fill the vacancy, only the budget bureau can prevent filling it. We have to supply workers if requested to do so."

"This means the man power tap is wide open and there's no way to shut it off," asserted Knutson. "It's a wonder to me we haven't been broke for a long time."

Knutson then told McNutt the WMC has more power than it realizes. "You're the keystone of the whole man power situation, yet you don't exercise the authority you have," he said.

UNIONS CONTROL 50,000 PUBLIC EMPLOYES IN CITY

CIO, AFL Compete in Rich Field.

Labor unions now control 50,000 government and other public employes in Cook county and are rapidly signing up others, a survey yesterday disclosed.

So intense is the competition in this lucrative field that rival units of the CIO and the AFL are reported raiding one another's membership.

Union spokesmen who made the 50,000 estimate, broke down the figure roughly as follows: government employes, 25,000; state employes, 700; schools, 15,000; sanitary district, 1,000; parks, 1,000; county, 1,700, and city, 5,500.

Services Loom Large.

William L. McFetridge, president of the International Building Service Employes' union, said about 10,000 of his membership within the county consist of city, county, and state employes, principally janitors, elevator operators, window washers, and maintenance employes, but including some clerical employes.

Helen Sewell, representing the Illinois State Employes' union, local 21, said from 4,000 to 6,000 state employes in Cook county are members of that and allied unions.

James Oliver, an official of the Municipal Office Employes' union, local 85, said 1,000 city hall and county building clerks are members.

Library and Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium employes belong to other locals, and there is a unit for house of correction employes, another for health department field inspectors, and one for the dental hygiene bureau. Chicago and Cook county law enforcement officers have an organization of their own.

Mrs. Sewell said her group has a large membership in various state institutions, but that CIO unions have been making heavy inroads among them.

Public officials, basing their estimate on available records, admittedly incomplete in that they fail to include some smaller governmental divisions, put the number of public employes in the county at 171,350, broken down as follows:

U. S. civil service commission reports	100,000
Federal noncivil service jobs, estimated	5,000
City of Chicago appropriations for	25,600
Cook county appropriations for	6,900
Chicago park district appropriations for	3,500
Sanitary district appropriations for	1,650
School board appropriations for	25,000
State of Illinois appropriations for	3,700
Total	171,350

1 of 12 on Public Pay Roll.

Union spokesmen estimate that there are approximately 200,000 public employes in Cook county. The census bureau ratio of one person in every 20 on a public pay roll, based on the last census, would give Cook county 150,000 public employes, but the ratio is conceded to be higher here because of the great number of federal employes transferred here since the war.

One estimate, which appears well founded, is that 1 person out of 12 in Cook county is on a public pay roll.

OPA TIGHTENS BAN ON BUYING NEW 1942 AUTOS

Because the nation's stockpile of new 1942 automobiles is rapidly dwindling, only 80 such cars will be available for purchase in the Chicago area this month compared with 96 in February and 156 in January, Rae E. Walters, regional OPA adminstrator, said yesterday.

At the same time, he disclosed that the OPA had reduced the categories of eligible purchasers from 26 to 8. These eight include physicians and surgeons, farm veterinarians, public health nurses and ministers.

Tomatoes and sweet peppers are given sharply higher prices in the OPA weekly fresh fruit and vegetable list for Chicago, effective tomorrow. James F. Riley Jr., acting area director, announced the following changes: Repacked tomatoes, up 7 cents a pound to 29 cents; bulk tomatoes, 6 cents a pound higher at 22 cents; sweet peppers, up 4 cents a pound to 23 cents; spinach, increased 1½ cents to 13½ cents a pound; iceberg lettuce, 13 cents a head, up 1 cent, and d'anjour pears, 1 cent a pound at 18 cents.

THE FOUR FREEDOMS IN INDIA.

India is sending a delegation to the San Francisco conference. All three members are British knights and two of the three are the viceroy's appointees to his executive council, which seems to establish their stoogeship authoritatively.

The character of government in India has just been described by Douglas Gardner, who has recently returned to Australia after representing the Sydney Morning Herald as a correspondent in the India-Burma war zone and with the United States fleet in the South Pacific. India, Gardner asserts, has a strict and unusually blundering censorship, the purpose of which he says is to permit no criticism of administrative acts or news of political activity in India to get out of the country.

The administration has power to arrest any editor and confiscate any printing plant without assigning a reason for its act. Messages out of the country are censored not once but twice, and information passed by censors in London or Sydney was frequently censored by Indian authorities from the point of view of its fitness for consumption by British troops in the country.

One use of the censorship was to withhold from the world knowledge of the famine last year which took thousands of lives in the Indian province of Bengal. Even use of the word "starvation" was forbidden until the wife of the viceroy made use of the immunity of her position to employ it in a radio talk. People who are not permitted even to complain publicly when they are starving are presumed to be represented in a congress of free nations at San Francisco by appointees of their rulers.

The American nation is getting a convincing advance demonstration of just how much the spirit of Mr. Roosevelt's Atlantic Charter is going to rule that gathering.

IT'S ALL TRANSPORTATION.

Chicago is working strenuously on plans for rebuilding its transportation facilities in preparation for post-war building. The legislature has a bill, blessed by Mayor Kelly and Gov. Green, to permit the purchase and operation of the "L" and surface lines as a municipal property.

Mayor Kelly and his engineering adviser, Joshua D'Esposito, also have a plan for a terminal authority, likewise to be established as a municipal corporation, to deal primarily with replacement of the four most antiquated of Chicago's railroad terminals. Under this plan the city, or more exactly the citizens of the Chicago area thru the authority, would go into the business of building and operating one or more consolidated railroad stations. The same authority would likewise deal with port facilities, airports, and truck terminals, it is indicated.

The idea is novel only insofar as it is projected into the railroad field. New York has a port authority, an interstate body organized by compact between the states of New York and New Jersey, to administer the docks and other maritime facilities of New York harbor as the economic unit that they are, disregarding state lines. This authority also has recently undertaken development of an interstate trucking terminal in downtown Manhattan.

We have had in abeyance since 1933 a proposal to create a port of Chicago authority, based on studies initiated by THE TRIBUNE two decades ago. The port of Chicago does not stop at the city limits but extends from Gary to Waukegan. Indiana passed a statute authorizing an interstate port authority, but political friction between Chicago and downstate Democrats caused the companion measure to fall by the wayside in the Illinois legislature a decade or more ago and it has not been revived.

The city is also studying air terminals. A large super-highway program is under consideration. A special authority has been proposed to develop one of these super-highways in the bed of the present abandoned Chicago-Michigan canal.

Mayor Kelly's idea of a terminal authority is good enough to deserve a most thoro exploration. The city's problem, however, is not one that can be confined to railroad terminals or local transportation or maritime facilities or airports or super-highways. What Chicago faces is not several problems but one problem, that of revamping its transportation.

Whether we are moving 16,000 tons of iron ore from the Mesabi range to South Chicago, a streamliner passenger to San Francisco, a carload of corn flakes to a Chicago wholesaler, a suburbanite to the loop, a toolmaker from Englewood to the Dodge plant, or an emergency shipment of spare parts from that plant to the Marianas, we are dealing with the same subject, transportation.

Chicago is now one of the greatest and potentially it is the greatest transportation center in the world. It is the biggest railroad center. It has one of the greatest concentrations of population in the world, with the attendant problems of local transportation. It potentially is the greatest center of air traffic. It cannot live without efficiently functioning water borne and highway transportation. The city's problem is not merely to develop these transportation systems, but to develop them harmoniously so that they will supplement each other instead of conflicting with and blockading the development of each other.

It is easy to see the objections that can be raised to such a proposal as this. One of them will be that an over-all plan would be so vast and the problems so numerous and intricate that its execution would stick at dead center and nothing would ever be accomplished in any transportation field. That is not true. Every obstacle that a coördinated approach to the transportation problem would have to overcome would likewise confront separate agencies attacking their own segment of the project. Coördination would eliminate many of these problems, not make new ones. It is not necessary, of course, that one grandiose agency be established to do everything. The work might be done better by a number of agencies consulting and coördinating their plans.

It will also be objected that any unified attack on Chicago's transportation would be prohibitively expensive. A comprehensive plan for local transportation, railroad terminals and electrification, port facilities, super-highways, and truck and barge terminals might, at a random estimate, cost a billion dollars in local, state, and federal contributions over a decade. What of it? Chicago is a 50 billion dollar city and transportation is its life blood. We will never realize our magnificent destiny until we start to think in terms of that magnificence.

NOTES ON WILD LIFE.

The cardinal has begun his morning song. Whatever his own ideas on this may be, to us the affinity he is seeking is the immortality we call spring, of which from a tree top there may be a bird's-eye view. Jam satis terris nivis, as the school boy remembers from the second Horatian ode, book I. Or does he? Too bad if he doesn't. Enough of snow. In Gen. Mark Clark's 5th army in sunny It he would be repeating it with variations oecullar to our own tongue. A great deal of plain ordinary humanity seems to prevail from century to century, a consideration which may or may not have been taken into account at Dumbarton Oaks for further note in San Francisco, April 25.

Jam satis has been around in these parts since early December and now that it's gone under the soft winds, we'd all join the cardinal in morning song if we could get into a tree top. The cardinal is the favorite pinup bird of these —smile when you say it—temperate climes, and year by year merits the academy award. He is not gone with the leaf and back with the bud. Altho he would be brilliant in the tropics he winters here on our countryside fare. There is many an eyeful in spring migrations, the sudden popping up of a flock of rose breasted grosbeaks, of goldfinches or indigo buntings, but the cardinal is for a 12 month stretch a one bird show.

Spring, altho as yet an illusion as we well know, has gained some credibility from the more reasonable conduct of the morning sun, which now seems to be paying attention to its calendar duties and is getting up for breakfast. This may or may not be ascribed to the cracking down by Mr. Byrnes the Mobilizer, who avers that you do not win wars by dancing after midnight, Waterloo to the contrary notwithstanding. Mr. Byrnes' spirit is up. The sun now does rise and shine. Our readers will be glad to know that there is in the files an explanation of why the morning sun plays the black market so long so early in the year. It is being saved for use when this bit of unsocial conduct is repeated next year.

Now that the brown leaves have reappeared from under the jam satis another question arises which is referred to learned observers. Does a squirrel ever find anything he, as a hoarder, has buried? Not referring to his winter cache but to the handouts he carries about the premises and pats down under two inches of soil and leaves. No immediate use can be seen for knowledge on this subject but, as scientists tell us, the applicability of a discovery may be delayed years until the place waiting for it is found. It's a one animal kingdom whatever may be the facts as to one world. Even the squirrels may have a message for the primates. Our economists profess themselves fearful that the citizenship will suddenly dig up everything it has put away and do wild things with it.

The taming Mr. Byrnes the Mobilizer has given wild life may have had nothing to do with the improved behavior of the sun and it may have had even less to do with the reappearance of the match of our forefathers, sometimes called the kitchen match. For reasons unknown the safety match which came in small boxes at a penny seems to be another in the lengthening list of mobilization casualties. We are beginning to tote around the long match which was contemporaneous with gas jets, coal oil lamps, and the handle bar mustache. This will make some changes in social customs.

The cigaret smoker must find two things, first, the cigaret; second, a place to scratch his match. Years ago the fleshy part of the thigh, covered, needless to say, with pants, was the most convenient and the most favored aid to smoking. At that time the gals did not smoke. It would have been their own problem then. It will be now. Sometimes the match stuck in the cloth. Sometimes it ripped the cloth. Rarely it started a fire. A person of agility and grace could scratch his match on the sidewalk without stopping his forward motion or dropping out of the conversation, if conversing. The sole of the shoe also could be used by imitating a pose of the stork or of the Ballet Russe.

Smokers used brick walls, the fireplace, the wall paper, the underside of the dining room table and left souvenirs of their habit. The matter became an art when the man with a match could ignite it by nicking the combustible end with his thumb nail. We shall see what all this comes to. For the present it is enough to know that the cardinal is singing and that hepaticae, robins, blood root, grackles, maple buds, bluebirds, snow, frost, and icicles are coming.

Nevertheless, the wonderful electronic home of the future will be incomplete without a selective doorbell, which shocks a peddler when pushed.—Detroit News.

A RARE ITEM.

"A Guide to the City of Chicago": Its public buildings, places of amusement, commercial, benevolent, and religious institutions; churches, hotels, railroads, etc., with a map of the city and numerous illustrations of the principal buildings. T. Ellwood Zell and Co., 117 S. Clark st., Chicago; 1868.

* * *

This pocket-size book in green cloth binding may have spent a part of its long life in the 10 cent bins of secondhand bookshops, but it is a rare item now and worth grabbing for a dollar, if you can find it. We have a notion that it was the first guidebook in Chicago's history, and its publication may be regarded as Chicago's metropolitan debut. An editorial foreword suggests priority, in these words:

"The want of a guidebook, such as the one here presented to the public, has been so long felt and so generally acknowledged that an apology for the present work is quite unnecessary."

* * *

In contents, typography, illustrations, and the inevitable advertising matter, it was a first rate job for its time. For example, this item on Michigan av.'s accommodations for visiting royalty:

"Richmond House, located corner of South Water st. and Michigan av., has recently been remodeled and refurnished thruout in splendid style, and is supplied with all the comforts and conveniences of a first-class house. The prince of Wales selected this house as his place of sojourn during his stay in Chicago. Its location near the Grand Central depot, together with the beautiful avenue upon which it is situated, renders it a most convenient and delightful stopping place for travelers. Richard Somers, proprietor."

* * *

That prince of Wales became Edward VII. 33 years later. The Grand Central station, to which he had easy access, is still there, but its existence is known only to local historians and Illinois Central freight handlers.

BALLADE OF RECKONING.

Foul little man in shirt of brown,
You've played your trumps and ace,
And still you know you're going down—
They flee from battle's dread embrace
And bombs that rain from German sky,
But earth affords no hiding place;
Their fools' reward is but to die.

King you would be, without a crown,
And lacking all of kingly grace;
Bite your fingernails and frown—
They're hunting for their living space,
Six feet of earth in which to lie;
Men whom the name of man debase,
Their fools' reward is but to die.

To rubble you've brought each German town,
Flattened as tho by the devil's mace.
Look on your work, you stupid clown;
Led to their death by a mental case.
Tremble, Fuehrer, for your slaves cry
To see death's mark on your pasty face—
Their fools' reward is but to die.

Bid them all a last good-by—

Clyde B. Clason.

Choppy and the Finer Things.

The most important thing about raising a dog is to give him the proper background.

In this we have tried very hard with Choppy. We tune the radio in on all the symphonic and concert music, but I'm sorry to say that Choppy shows no interest in culture. His favorite program was the one featuring the Chicken Lady, who cackled operas for him. This Choppy liked, and he likes any one else who imitates chickens on the radio.

Well, we failed in the music, so now we are going to try art. We are debating whether we should buy a Rembrandt, an Inness, or a Corot for him. I'm afraid the only picture that would interest Choppy would be one of a steak, and it should also smell like steak, either raw or cooked. This would be a "still life," I presume, but Choppy won't care, so long as it is a steak.

I wonder if any art dealer has an old master's painting of a nice lifelike steak, with a good strong smell of steak attached to it, and I don't mean one on the hoof.

Come to think of it, if there is such a picture I'll buy it for myself. I haven't seen a steak for ages. Roy Engel.

HIS GIFTS.

The man brought gifts of fame and gold
And proudly waited there.
The angel spoke, "Why do you come
With empty hands and bare?"

He came again. "I left my gifts
A neighbor's load to pull."
The angel smiled, "Look down," he said,
And lo, his hands were full.

CARE OF THE PREMATURE INFANT.

ANY infant that enters this world weighing less than 5½ pounds and measuring less than 17½ inches is considered premature. In other words, it is not quite ready to compete with its new surroundings.

The will to live, in these tiny masses of humanity, varies greatly and does not depend entirely on weight. A two-pounder may be vigorous and active from the start, whereas a tot of 4 or 5 pounds may be weak and listless. Usually, however, the larger they are, the greater the possibility of quick adjustment to environment.

There are many physical causes for lack of vitality, such as brain hemorrhages, unexpanded lungs, defective heart, or other congenital deformities. As a rule, however, the chief difficulty is underdevelopment. Their heat regulating mechanisms are unable to control body temperature. The center of the brain—the part which watches over breathing and cardiac action—is not entirely capable of performing its full duty. The digestive tract cannot tolerate the quota of food required. All of this produces a definite imbalance, which results in susceptibility to any infection that comes along.

In years past, a premature birth was looked upon as an unfortunate event. Knowledge and equipment were limited, hence few such babies were saved. Today the story is different. These tikes have an excellent chance of survival. But they must be kept warm and the air they breathe must be germ-free, properly moistened, and contain extra oxygen. The modern incubator —an all essential device—answers these needs. It should be so constructed that an adequate amount of oxygen will be supplied.

The atmosphere within should be humidified to 40 or 50 per cent. The temperature may be controled electrically to within 1 degree of variation, averaging between 80 and 90 degrees F. In summer weather, when the outside thermometer is higher than this level, provision must be made to cool the air down to what it should be. These cabinets permit examination, nursing care, and feeding without removing the little patient from its air conditioned home.

Nourishment should be postponed for 12 to 24 hours after birth. This allows time for the nose, throat, and windpipe to be cleaned of mucus and also for the development of some coördination in the swallowing reflex. Not more than a teaspoonful of water should be offered about every two hours for the first day. The next day, breast milk may be substituted at alternate feedings. If this is well tolerated, milk may be furnished every 2 or 3 hours, and increased one-half to one teaspoonful at each meal.

Each step or change must be made cautiously, until the crisis has passed. This may take three or four weeks. When weight finally reaches the tremendous sum of 5 or 6 pounds, we can then handle this early arrival more like a normal newborn.

Peace in Whose Time?

The first man in our time to speak of "peace in our time" was the king's minister, Stanley Baldwin, that man of pigs and pipes to whom Churchill once referred as "a pale reflection of everybody's perplexities." A year later another king's minister, Neville Chamberlain, coming home to England after disposing of Czechoslovakia with bland indifference, stood on a balcony at 10 Downing st. while the joyous mobs below howled "Rule, Britannia" and "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

"My good friends," the jolly good fellow declaimed on this frabjous day, "this is the second time in our history that there has come back from Germany to Downing st. peace with honor. [Note: The other was Disraeli at the congress of Berlin in 1878.] I believe it is peace for our time."

Before Mr. Chamberlain and his umbrella had flown to Berchtesgaden to buy his peace with honor, England's poet laureate, John Masefield, had risen to the occasion with a commemorative quatrain:

As Priam to Achilles for his son,
So you, into the night, divinely led,
To ask that young men's bodies, not yet dead,
Be given from the battle not begun.

The supplicant returned with his hollow victory, and his hollow phrase, "peace in our time," swept the English speaking world. The young men's bodies not yet were dead. Or, rather, not the English speaking young men's bodies. The world swept on toward self-effacement.

The two English prime ministers were given credit for the origin of this selfish phrase, but all they actually did was to give it a modern public and a destructive following. It probably is as old as self-interest, but in 1776 it was a phrase of scorn and contumely. This was when Thomas Paine, accompanying the tattered remnants of Washington's army on the retreat thru New Jersey in that bitter winter of imminent defeat, wrote it in his first American Crisis paper, the one beginning "These are the times that try men's souls. . . ."

Paine was urging the laggard, the disheartened, the vacillating, and the unaware to fight. Those who wish to reap the blessings of freedom, he wrote, must "like men, undergo the fatigues of supporting it."

"I once felt [he wrote] all that kind of anger which a man ought to feel, against the mean principles that are held by the tories: a noted one, who kept a tavern at Amboy, was standing at his door with as pretty a child in his hand, about 8 or 9 years old, as I ever saw, and after speaking his mind as freely as he thought was prudent, finished with this unfatherly expression: 'Well, give me peace in my day!' . . . A generous person should have said: 'If there must be trouble, let it be in my day, that my child may have peace'."

Mr. Chamberlain was 69 when he found peace in his time. It was gone a year before he died at the age of 71. Did he know peace of mind or conscience in that last 14 months of his conciliatory life? Mr. Baldwin was 69 when he found peace in his time. A title, Baldwin of Bewdley, was bestowed upon him for his remarkable finding. He now is 77, basking quietly and silently somewhere in his land. Is his mind calm, his sleep untroubled?

Of the three only Tom Paine, who didn't want it, found peace in his time. He had been the spirit behind two revolutions, the American and the French, but failed in the third, the English; he was the great apostle of the rights of man, and his world was at peace when he died. It was 1809, and he was 72, and the good, fine citizens of New Rochelle, N. Y., where a grateful first American congress had given Paine a small farm, ripped the branches from the trees that shaded his grave, pulled up the few flowers growing over his bones, and hacked his tombstone to bits.

The stricken parents of the world must look with tense anguish from Yalta to San Francisco. In whose time will the peace be? In that of Churchill, who is 70? Of Roosevelt, who is 63? Of Stalin, who is 66? Or of the unborn?

THE ITALIAN ARMISTICE.

Chicago, March 11.—Who is responsible for the unhealthy political situation in Italy today? The Bonomi government? Not entirely. Washington? It must share some of the blame. Certainly the Italian people today do not know where they stand. They are puzzled at Washington's refusal to make Italy's armistice terms public. In their grievances, Italians argue that they cannot coöperate and work for a better understanding with the allies if they are kept in the dark about the terms imposed upon Italy.

It is obvious that if these terms are not revealed soon, a growing resentment toward Washington will develop, especially since the allies have hastily made public armistice terms imposed on enemy countries such as Finland, Bulgaria, Romania, and Hungary.

Are these terms imposed on Italy, a co-belligerent, so bad that the allies dare not publish them? Is the Bonomi government a puppet government? Have the Italian ministers given an oath to the allies to keep the armistice terms imposed on Italy a secret? The Italian people have a right to know. Such secret diplomacy defeats itself.

The Mazzini society, which has fought fascism from the very beginning, joins the Italian people in its appeal to Washington for enlightenment on a matter that concerns the welfare of all freedom loving peoples of the world.

DR. E. MOMIGLIANO, President.

YOU'RE 193TH IN LINE, BUDDY.

Cicero, March 10.—A friend called my attention to the picture and letter from a group of 44th division soldiers who asked information concerning my identity. The picture was put in Yank magazine by my brother, who serves in a tank unit in Germany.

I'm 20, 5 feet 5 inches, weigh 125, have very dark hair, blue eyes, and am single. I correspond with 197 fellows in all branches of service and would like to hear from the fellows who wrote the letter. ROSE MARIE ROCKS.

EXEMPTIONS FOR CHARITY.

Chicago, March 10.—I have seen pictures and comment concerning Mrs. Roosevelt accepting the $8,000 mink coat, the golden crown, and several harem dresses. What prevents her from giving $8,000 to the Red Cross drive and the value of the golden crown and harem dresses to the American Mission for Lepers? These worthwhile donations would give her a 15 per cent exemption on her income tax.

MRS. ELSIE HALZINGER.

A SOCIAL GAIN?

Streator, Ill., March 10.—I don't like to bother you, but would appreciate knowing whether a certain rumor is true. We hear that a man can be deferred in Chicago if he is engaged in an essential strike. Is there anything to that? ANTHONY LIPKY.

HEAVY DATE.

Chicago, March 8.—So long as it was accepted in the name of all American women, do you suppose I could borrow the "mink" come Saturday night?

SADIE.

MOVE THE STATUE.

Chicago, March 8.—After reading Canada's freedoms, may I suggest that we move the Statue of Liberty across the border? MARY J. DRAUDE.

A GRADE "A" GRIPE.

We are a group of soldiers in the European theater of operations and have recently read in our army paper that 4,000 more employes in the Detroit area have recently gone on strike, making a total of 17,500 on strike in this area as of March 1.

We are wondering how civilians at home would react if 17,500 soldiers went over the hill in a body over here. We are not first line combat soldiers and do not make any martyr claims for ourselves, but we do get up to the line and see infantrymen in foxholes, putting up with inconceivable discomfort, and we think something should be done about the "poor civilian" who strikes because one of his union committeemen was booted out of a war plant. What became of that no-strike pledge?

MASTER SGT. MIRON B. WASIK,
STAFF SGT. ALEXANDER WYSOCHANSKI,
STAFF SGT. JOSEPH M. HANNIGAN,
TECH. SGT. HOWARD K. CARLSON.

ROBBING THE SOLDIERS.

Moline, Ill., March 9.—The Moline Women's Republican club, at its last meeting, sent three petitions to congress asking that legislation be drafted immediately to pay our soldiers in foreign lands in United States dollars and not in the local currency of the country in which they are stationed.

Billions for our allies, while short changing our soldiers, is a national disgrace. No government practicing such policies should sentence its soldiers for black market operation when guilty itself of such fraud. The policy of interpreting the laws of our congress to suit the whims of the New Dealers must cease. We owe a debt of gratitude to our soldiers for letting us know of this robbery abroad.

MRS. LAMBERT KUNTZ.

COMMUNIST OFFICERS.

Lafayette, Ind., March 1.—It is high time that Christian people the world over resisted the communist conspiracy which now is about to control the army as it has our civil government.

"Whenever the Communists get control of the army—all others are lost," has long been the warning of the unfortunate people of communist despoiled countries. That time is at hand here in the United States and we whose sons would be at the mercy and disposal of Godless officers know it! Talk about civilian morale!

FIRED JUST BEFORE VACATION.

Chicago, March 12.—For no fault of my own, I have been dismissed from my position. Dismissal came just before the time employes were to pick their two weeks' vacation period. After working the entire year without absence, I should like to know if I am not entitled to my vacation money and how I may force my ex-employer to pay me that amount. S. C.

Your right to the vacation money depends on the expressed or implied agreement as to a vacation. If, on all the facts, it appeared that the employer was discharging you as a subterfuge for avoiding paying you the vacation money, then your facts would seem good enough to warrant employing an attorney.

"3¢ PER CHECK" ACCOUNT (No Minimum Balance Required)

This is NO "Easy Money"

Small sums such as this are borrowed daily by millions of people from friends, relatives, employers. Such borrowings are troublesome not because they are difficult to repay, but because they are embarrassing to ask for. And because they are small, we know they are sometimes overlooked and personal friendships jeopardized.

That is why a person opening a 3¢ per check (no minimum balance) account here, has the privilege of arranging, for Automatic Credit—which allows him to write a check for as much as $25 more than he has in the bank—whenever he needs a loan.

Because the charge for this service is small (3¢), and the method of repaying so convenient and automatic, some depositors, we realize, might form the habit of using the borrowing privilege unwisely. We therefore respectfully urge each Check-Credit client to use his or her borrowing privilege only to perform the friendly, useful and real service for which it is designed . . . to conveniently meet the occasional small emergencies that arise in these modern times.

Check-Credit is just another expression of this bank's policy—providing financial services designed to our customers' needs. Call personally, write, or phone Whitehall 4500 for full particulars.

THE SCIENCE OF SATISFACTORY LIVING

Indeed the Discoverer and Founder of this Science, Mary Baker Eddy, writes (Rudimental Divine Science, p. 2): "Healing physical disease is the smallest part of Christian Science. It is only the bugle-call to thought and action in the higher realm of infinite goodness."

Students of Christian Science have found it bringing them a fuller sense of capability, usefulness, and satisfaction than they had known before; giving new color and interest to their lives; enriching their friendships; giving them understanding and an experience of peace and joy surpassing all their expectations.

They have seen clearly that this Science is the Science of Life and of satisfactory living.

The complete explanation of Christian Science, and of the means of utilizing it on behalf of oneself and others, is given in the Christian Science textbook,

SCIENCE and HEALTH with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy

This great book, which after hundreds of editions continues to be in increasing world-wide demand, may be had in cloth for $2 or $3, or in morocco leather (blue, brown, or black) for $5, at

FAIL TO SETTLE STRIKE TIEUP OF 21 GARY SCHOOLS

A lengthy holiday for 20,000 Gary public school pupils was in sight last night after a five hour conference between a committee representative of the Central Labor body and the school trustees failed to end the strike of 130 janitors who are demanding a union contract. The strikers are members of the Building Service Employes union, local 123-A [AFL].

Gale Murrin, president of the labor body, reported that the union and the school officials were still deadlocked, and Edward T. Doyne, president of the school trustees, declared no further meetings had been scheduled and that no contracts would be signed with the strikers.

Teachers in the 21 schools closed went on record yesterday in a public statement supporting the janitors. The pupils have been on an enforced vacation since the janitors struck last Thursday.

Jane Merrick Is Married to Army Officer

BY JUDITH CASS.

IN a ceremony last Saturday which was arranged on a few hours' notice, Miss Jane Tappan Merrick, daughter of Mrs. Clinton Merrick, became the bride of Lt. Arthur Bruce Brightman Jr. of the army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Brightman of Sioux City, Ia., who formerly lived in Evanston. The wedding took place at 4 p. m. in the Winnetka home of Mrs. Merrick, with the families and a few close friends present. The Rev. Samuel Harkness officiated.

Mrs. Phil E. Gilbert Jr., whose husband, Maj. Gilbert, is serving in Germany with Gen. Patton, attended her sister, and John Schultz of Evanston served as best man. The bride was given in marriage by her godfather, Tappan Gregory. Absent from the family circle were another sister, Miss Margaret Merrick, a debutante of the past season, who did not have time to return from Smith college, and the bride's brothers, Lt. George Clinton Merrick of the army, who is in Paris, and Corp. Richard L. Merrick, who is in the Philippines.

Lt. Brightman and his bride have gone to Brownwood, Tex., where they will live until he goes overseas. Mrs. Brightman attended the Roycemore school, Briarcliff Junior college, and the American Academy of Art, and has been doing Red Cross work at Great Lakes.

When Lt. Brightman leaves, his wife either will join her mother in Winnetka or go to Pittsburgh, Pa., to be with Mrs. Richard Merrick and her children, who will move east in May.

On the Calendar.

To raise money for St. Chrysostom's church, its woman's guild and auxiliary is planning a fashion show and tea to be given from 3 to 5 p. m. Tuesday, April 10, in the Casino club. A number of young women who will be observed entering the church in the fashionable Easter Sunday crowd will model in the fashion show, of which Mrs. John R. Ritchie is chairman. Mrs. Arthur Hollaman heads the guild. Others on the benefit committee are Mrs. W. Homer Hartz, Mrs. William J. Hoppe, Mrs. Earl Browder, Mrs. William A. Humphreys, and Mrs. Fred Geriach.

Members of the Beverly Hills center of the Infant Welfare society will have an Easter parade of their own a bit early this year when they gather Monday in the home of Mrs. Earle Combs, wearing spring outfits which will be contributed to the Thrift shop operated by the center. A prize will be given to the member wearing the most articles, which means that some will come with two or three hats on their heads and several layers of dresses. A prize will be given to the best dressed family group, and to the best dressed member. The shop grossed more than $16,000 last year, and its problem, like that of many retail stores, is to find enough merchandise to supply its many customers.

Because of the success of last year's benefit, a series of programs for children, Circle 25 of the Oak Park and River Forest branch of the Infant Welfare society is planning a similar benefit this year, to take place on three different Saturdays this spring. The first party will be held March 24 in the Oak Park High school. Mrs Hales Bailey is chairman of the series, assisted by Mrs. George Southworth and Mrs. William Welbolt.

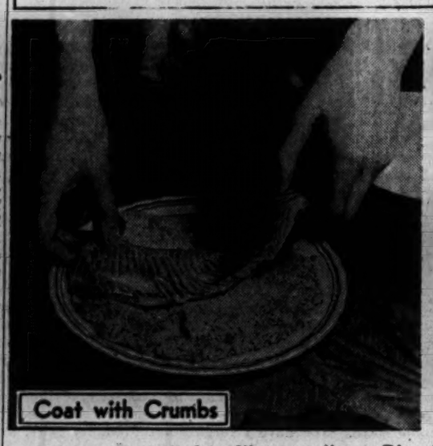
Mary Meade Shows How to Quick Bake Fish Fillets



1. Use small whole fish, fillets, or slices. Dip in salted milk (1 tablespoon salt to 1 cup milk), then in fine bread crumbs. When possible, use one hand for wet work, one for dry.

2. Lay fish on greased baking sheet and spread or sprinkle with melted fat. (Do not use flour, cornmeal, or cracker crumbs for coating in quick bake method, as they do not brown evenly.)

3 Bake 10 minutes in very hot oven (500 to 600 degrees) or until fish are a beautiful golden brown. Do not add water or baste. With a pancake turner, remove to hot serving dish.

4. Serve at once. The quick bake method of preparing fish is superior to slow baking, for it rapidly cooks the fish protein without drying flesh. Method cannot be used for large whole fish.

Meat Famine Laid to Hungry Stock and OPA

Blame for the meat shortage in Illinois and other areas was laid directly into the lap of the office of price administration yesterday by P. O. Wilson, secretary of the National Livestock Producers association, who said that the present situation would get worse.

"Present price schedules forced on the industry by OPA do not permit the finishing of cattle by feed lot operators," Wilson said. "Consequently, cattle are being turned out with less finish and less poundage, and are producing less meat for the dinner table."

Wilson said that until the government recognized that price levels are too low to permit farmers to buy feed and pay labor costs the market—and the public—would suffer.

The labor situation, already bad, is being gradually worsened by selective service, he added, citing numerous cases of Illinois farmers who will not feed live stock of any kind this year because their sons have been or will be drafted.

Wilson's prediction of darker days ahead was reflected in reports from federally inspected slaughter houses thruout the country which show that the slaughter of hogs has decreased from 50 to 75 per cent in the last two weeks, as compared to the corresponding period a year ago. At the same time, cattle slaughter has been only slightly heavier than last year, thereby upsetting a government prediction that a heavy influx of cattle would offset the pork decline, packers said.

Slaughter of every type of live stock decreased in February, compared to the previous months, inspectors reported. Cattle dropped from 1,283,780 to 1,148,593 head, hogs from 5,299,107 to 3,267,348, sheep from 2,073,235 to 1,621,643, and calves from 559,505 to 442,259.

Housewives who have turned to various egg dishes as a substitute for meat may soon be hard pressed to find eggs, the Chicago Mercantile exchange said yesterday. Only 10,000 cases of eggs are arriving at the Chicago market daily now, as compared with 31,000 cases a year ago.

Market experts blamed bad weather for the drop in production, explaining that plenty of sunshine is needed to encourage hens to lay.

The butter situation, which has been poor for several months, is expected to get worse soon, according to Frank E. Blood, chief of the midwest food and dairy production division of the war food administration. The setting aside of more butter for the war services, Blood said, has resulted in "slightly tighter" civilian supplies.

He predicted that butter available to civilians will be about 2 million pounds less in April and May than in the two preceding months.

Inquiring Camera Girl

[The Tribune will pay $5 for each interesting question submitted by a reader and used by The Tribune. Today's question was submitted by Walter Johnson, 7400 S. Union av.]

THE QUESTION.
WHERE ASKED.
Various theaters.
THE ANSWERS.

Robert R. Gould, 2245 Washington blvd., Chicago theater—In the fall of the year a man came to the door and said, "I believe I left my shoes in the theater. May I come in and look for them?" He was stocking footed and had been walking around for a full half hour before he discovered he'd left his shoes behind.

Fred Schoot, 1851 W. 13th st., Woods—When a man rushed in and said, "I've lost my appendix in your theater; I left it on the seat beside me," we naturally thought it was a joke. But what a queer sense of humor! Actually, the man had left his appendix in the theater—in a bottle of formaldehyde.

Magdalene Lizette, 4047 Ellis av., Telenews — "Have you seen a small child?" frantically inquired a young mother. "I brought her along with me and I became so wrapped up in the movie I forgot all about her. I've been gone about 45 minutes." The usherettes had been entertaining the child. The mother was greatly relieved.

John A. Dendor, 2241 W. Cortez, Apollo—The night man was sweeping the theater when suddenly he saw an eye staring up at him. Some one had lost a glass eye. I don't know if it belonged to a man or a woman. It was a friendly, light brown, slightly bloodshot eye. Strangely no one ever called for it.

Louise Lacki, 2014 W. Rice st., Oriental — Occasionally I've had false teeth turned in at the desk. I can't imagine how people can lose them, but it's happened more than once. They're terribly embarrassed when they ask for them and usually hurry away to a secluded spot where they can put their teeth in place.

John Summers, 1660 Dayton, United Artists—It's a common occurrence, but it seems unusual to me how people can lose their hats and forget where they lost them. We get on the average of six or seven hats a week and many are never called for. People put them on their laps and when they stand up the hats fall to the floor.

Memories of '93ers Flit Across Boards of 1st World's Fair

The Association of '93ers, performers, workmen, and "just visitors" at the World's Columbian exposition in Chicago in 1893, held its monthly meeting yesterday at 19 S. La Salle st. Mrs. May M. Gibson, 82, of 217 E. Cullerton st., founder, presided at the informal session.

Mrs. Gibson's memories of the first Chicago World's fair probably are more numerous than those of other members, she said, because she assisted her husband, the exposition's official photographer, thruout the event.

Other members present at yesterday's proceedings included Joseph J. Journey Underground

(Copyright: 1945, By The Chicago Tribune.) —o— By Flight Officer David G. Prosser

SYNOPSIS: The author enlisted in the Canadian air force in 1941, at the age of 20, and won his wings as a navigator. In 1943 he transferred to the American air force. On his ninth combat mission, Prosser's Flying Fortress was shot down over France, and the crew bailed out. He landed alone in a field, seriously injuring his ankle. A kindly French family hid him in their attic for 13 days, until he was able to walk. Then they gave him civilian clothes to wear over his uniform, got him a false identity card, helped him go to Paris by train, and bought him a railroad ticket to Nevers, 135 miles south of the capital. There Prosser met a young worker who introduced him to the director of public works for the township. The director took him to the home of a business man, who kept him overnight, then turned him over to Raymond, an automobile battery repair man. Raymond took Prosser by truck to his home. There Prosser met Raymond's parents, his sister, Marie, 19, and his cousin Yvonne, 17. The family obtained a doctor who treated Prosser's foot. Food was good and life pleasant in this household.

INSTALMENT XVI.

Most following days were much like this one. I arose at 9 or 9:30, shaved, and managed to get some sort of a bath in the limited facilities that were available. Either one or the other of the girls stayed with me most of the day to see that I was entertained properly. Yvonne stayed more often than Marie. This younger girl seemed to have few friends in the town, and evidently was in the habit of staying at home.

Marie often went to her mother's house, both for luncheon and supper. Occasionally Yvonne would go out for a meal, in which case Marie would be left to entertain me. I felt that Yvonne was more of a strain than a source of amusement. She was so young and vivacious that I think I failed to live up to her ideal of an allied airman, and much of the time we spent together was passed either in silence or in listening to the radio. But the afternoons with Marie were enjoyable. She told me just what the German officers were doing; about the night the prostitutes visited them, and of another evening on which they entertained a general and a colonel. This caused great excitement.

The night before Siegfried, one of the German officers, had told her what an important affair this was to be, for this general was the C-in-C of the whole area, and it was only because he had been in Russia with one of the other officers that he visited them.

As a rule the officers did not have meat for dinner, but only spaghetti, potatoes, fish, sausage, and fruit and cheese as a dessert. However, this evening there was to be a chicken, three bottles of wine, several vegetables, and a wonderful tart.

Marie also told me how she and Yvonne recently had forced Siegfried to take an untimely bath one day when they were out by the swing at the edge of the little stream, where any one swinging went over both land and water. They had made Siegfried lose his balance just as he swept out over the water, and he had fallen in the brook completely dressed. The girls professed their innocence and Siegfried, preferring not to have this story told in the mess, promised to let the girls off if they said nothing about it. "Of course he couldn't have done anything," Marie said. The story did leak out, much to the amusement of the other officers.

We talked much of music. Marie had studied singing so knew much more about this subject than I, and she taught me many things about it. She was studying English as well as German, so I tried to teach her some English. I jokingly told her this was dangerous for her to learn, for she might easily, in a moment of forgetfulness, speak English to the Germans. "O, no," she smiled.

From time to time she spoke of the future. Marie wanted to be a scholar and was planning to go to the Sorbonne after the war. "I know why you want to go to the university; I think Paris is the attraction and not the Sorbonne," I teased her. In her innocent, sincere way she bitterly denied this, saying, "No, I really want to study. Why do you foreigners always think we French women are so legere [frivolous]? No, David, we are not all legere, and I am very serious when I say I want to go to Paris to study. Then, after I finish my studies, I want to travel. I feel I must see England, perhaps America, and certainly Germany, or parts of it at any rate."

I asked her why she wanted to go to Germany. "Well, in spite of the Germans, I like them. Maybe this is an odd whim and I should not, but personally I like many of the Germans here. Their general attitude in many respects to life pleases me. Of course I should not say this, and truly I feel the same hatred toward them as the invader of France that every Frenchman does. To get a fair picture I have tried to read everything I can about Germany, but now it is so difficult to get anything that is not propaganda. O, if I am to find the truth about Germany I want to go there."

She was very sincere in what she said, and convinced me that her liking for Germans could in no possible way be interpreted as treachery or collaboration. At 6 o'clock each evening she would leave me to go over for a little German conversation with the officers, and in 10 minutes be back to tell me what they had to say and what they had to eat. It seemed rather odd that one minute she should be visiting German officers and the next an American officer.

Afternoons spent with Yvonne became trying after a short time. She had little to talk of except gossip about the local town people whom I did not know. Her questions were invariably the most difficult for me to answer. The most usual type was, "What do the women of New York really wear?" My French was still very utility, and an effort to describe a dress or hat usually resulted in complete failure or a muddle so intricate that even I had not the faintest idea what I was saying. Most of the time we played the radio or gramophone, and while I listened, Yvonne painted her toenails or fingernails or did something else of that nature.

One afternoon just after luncheon, when Raymond and I were listening to radio London, she came in, dressed to go out for the afternoon. Raymond asked her where she was going and she replied, "I have some shopping to do in town. Will you please give me 100 francs?"

Raymond refused. She at first assumed that he was teasing her, so she tried to cajole him into giving her the money, but with no success. She next tried to be the perfection of sweetness, gently imploring and pleading with him to be kind and generous. This method failed as completely as the first. Then she indignantly demanded the money, stamping her foot and calling Raymond "wicked, selfish, and mean." He only smiled at this, and finally she burst into tears, shouting, "Salaud" [You nasty person] at him between sobs, and even resorting to blows.

Raymond laughed loudly as she hit him, but he gave in and gave her a new 100 franc note. It was remarkable to see how quickly the expression of rage and tragedy that distorted her face was replaced by a sweet smile. However, she did not thank him, but merely said, "Well, it's about time," and marched off on her shopping tour.

Several times during my stay Yvonne had very heated arguments with the maid. Words flew so fast and furiously that I never understood the cause of these misunderstandings, and at any rate of speed Yvonne was difficult to understand, for whatever she said she said with the greatest possible amount of slang.

Marie was with us during one of these arguments. She never actually took sides in them, but she sat quietly with me in Raymond's room. Once when the noise from the kitchen was most alarming, she leaned over and told me confidentially, "La bonne est mechante, [The maid is ill natured] but we must keep her as there are no others to be had."

One afternoon as I was listening to radio London Yvonne rushed in with a new magazine she had just obtained. At first she was not going to show it to me, teasingly saying that I was too young to see such a thing. I soon put an end to that nonsense and gained possession of the book. It was one of the most pornographic pieces of literature, complete with all the photographs, that any one could imagine.

I was almost shocked to discover that a girl of her age had a book of this sort, and very surprised at her familiarity with the subject matter. She guided me thru the book, pointing out the parts to which I should pay particular attention, and those other sections which she thought boring.

Affecting a pedantic tone of voice, I said, "A girl like yourself should never see anything like this."

She merely giggled, "You should see some of those Raymond brings home." I gathered that nothing was safe in this house from her eyes.

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD . . . . . By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 13.—Pat Kirkwood, English actress, will be starred in "No Leave, No Love," a Joe Pasternak production, with either Bob Walker or Van Johnson co-starring. So, when Alexander Korda has a story ready he will have at his disposal Greer Garson, Judy Garland, Katharine Hepburn, Lana Turner, Irene Dunne, Myrna Loy, and Lucille Ball. Gosh! That Pat must be something special. . . . Mary Pickford has an option on Marion Hutton, Betty's sister, for "One Touch of Venus," and there's talk about Gregory La Cava directing it. . . . I wonder if you've stopped to think how well the Irish have done this year. Frank Faye has given the best performance of the year in "Harvey," Laurette Taylor in "The Glass Menagerie," and don't forget Jimmy Dunn and Joan Blondell in "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn." . . . Richard Conte finally got "Command to Embezzle," with Jimmy Dunn and Sheila Ryan.

They're Back Together Again.

Ever since Bill Gargan did "The Milky Way" for Leo McCarey he's been waiting for another chance. It came along in "Bells of St. Mary's." . . . The picture "Meet Me in St. Louis" is doing terrific business in London. All the G. Is who have proof they were born in St. Louis got in free. Do we do that here? . . . Barbara Britton's acting helped lift the mortgage from her church, the Methodist Episcopal in West Long Beach. . . . Stephen Richards marries Annelle Hayes [Miss Texas of 1943] at the Wee Kirk o' the Heather in July. . . . Ralph Bellamy is part angel to three New York shows—"The Deep Mrs. Skyes," which opens in Boston; "The Lovely Lead," now playing Philadelphia, and the new Elliot Nugent play. Now he's looking for one to produce for himself.

Look Out, Harvard.

If Ethel Smith becomes a professor of organ music at Harvard, does that mean Disney will get some shots of her with his Donald Duck? . . . Claudette Colbert is wanted for "Perilous Holiday." . . . Joyce Von Patten is being tested at Universal for the daughter of Merle Oberon in "As It Was Before." The child actress made quite a name for herself in "The Perfect Marriage" with Miriam Hopkins. . . . Lana Turner's most exciting date while touring for "Keep Your Powder Dry" was in Washington at a luncheon on Capitol Hill, when she sat beside Adm. Halsey. Later on the admiral and his aide gave a cocktail party for the little blonde. . . . Well, what do you know! Instead of running one of their own pictures, the Jack Warners ran "Wuthering Heights" for the second time in their own home.

Let the Chips Fall . . .

Merle Oberon, in looking thru a book about the life of Chopin, allowed the book to open where it would, and her eye fell on this sentence: "Superwoman—George Sand, but she was hopelessly ugly." . . . Now Alan Reed [Falstaff Openshaw] is compiling a book of his poems, rhymes, and sillies that he's written over a period of years. 'Twill be dedicated to Fred Allen. . . . Vernon Duke is here working with Sam Heffenstein on their play, "Nantucket," but goes back to New York for the first performance of his Second Symphony, in Carnegie hall April 30.

In the Mailbag.

My friend, Lt. Paul Twitchell, of Paducah writes: "This is the world's most traveled typewriter. With it I've seen the totem poles in Alaska, rainbows over Pacific islands, oysters growing on trees in the West Indies, lemon groves in Palestine where Jesus once walked; Crete, Italy, Australia, Mexico, New Zealand, Peru, Brazil, Tahiti, Aleutians, England, Spain, South Africa, and a hundred other places. But the United States of America is still the only home I'm longing for, because there my friends dwell. I wonder if you'll ever know how strange it is, out here at sea, listening to Bing Crosby bring his message from another world? Or what it does to your mental workings when you see an old darky hobbling down a road beaten out of the African jungle by bulldozers? Reminds me of nights long ago, as a boy, listening to darkies sing hymns in a little church in my home town. Nor have I forgotten the county fairs, and where the finest peaches grew that a boy ever stole. Or how to jug for catfish in the yellow Ohio. Last night, aboard this ship, we saw an old picture, 'Slightly Dangerous,' with Lana Turner. The film broke at the most interesting places, and in the middle of it the rain poured down. The audience rose, went to their quarters, put on their rain gear, and sat thru the rest of their film. I'll bet you've never found an audience like that."

The correct bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	Pass	1 no trump	Pass
3 no trump	Pass	3 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

No trump responses, like the poor, are always with us, and yet, for many players, the handling of the situation remains an unsolved problem. Actually the question is not at all involved. A few minutes' study should clear it up. We have discussed this problem from the standpoint of the opening bidder, and we have ascertained that when the response of one no trump is made, the opener should not speak again unless he has about a trick and a half in excess of his bid.

We come now to the consideration of responder's duties. In today's hand, North, having a trick and a half above his bid, raised his partner's response to two no trump, whereupon South promptly passed, because as he said, "I had a very poor hand." His judgment was not sound. His response had promised one trick. For purposes of no trumps, he actually had a very good holding in every suit. The jack of spades should be promoted because his partner bid that suit and the other three suits are all stopped, particularly the diamonds, which promise to yield several tricks if partner has an honor in the suit, which is almost a certainty. When the responder has more than one trick, he should accept partner's invitation to go game.

The argument, "But partner, we were vulnerable" was unsound. It is just as important to bid again when vulnerable as when not. While the penalty for defeat is greater, remember that the reward for achievement is correspondingly increased when you are vulnerable.

TOMORROW'S PROBLEM.

Have Hobbies, Reader Urges Invalid of 15

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

While this letter isn't from a young invalid, I am printing it as the first of this series because an outside viewpoint often is fresh and helpful:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans:

"I read with keen interest your article about the invalid 15 year old girl who wants to know how to fill in her time. Here is a suggestion which might help.

"All my life I have been so busy that I have never been able to find the time for the great number and variety of things which I would like to do. Naturally I have not wished to be in this young girl's position, but if I were confined to my bed for any length of time I know what I would do.

"First of all I would stop trying to entertain myself. I would be a very busy woman who needed to keep close watch on the clock so that no more than a budgeted allotment of time could be devoted to such pleasures as listening to the radio, reading, writing letters, playing records and solitaire, sewing, and so forth.

"I would begin my day by primping and fixing myself to look as pretty and 'smooth' as possible. Every girl likes this idea, and even a girl confined to her bed could have creams, powders, and so on, at hand.

"If I were this girl I would have my friends or my parents or both give me at least three or four daily newspapers and several monthly magazines. From these I would secure articles, pictures, and the like, on various subjects and make probably a dozen separate books. Right now so much is being written which is worth while, and this intelligent 15 year old who may be weary of merely reading, is fortunate in having the time to weed out much of this good material.

"Just think how interesting such a book as 'Headlines of the War' would be with a whole book of just headlines and dates. Also how interesting a book of funny cartoons would be. She could even send such books [not too large] to soldiers' hospitals or children's wards in hospitals which would give her a definite feeling of being useful. Then think how fascinating it would be to hunt for articles on a certain subject so that her little book could be used almost as a reference book on that subject.

"This kind of work would require reading, yes, but also a great deal of activity with the hands, such as cutting, sorting, and pasting. Also there would be intelligent decisions to make, filing to do, and a great deal to talk about. She would no longer be a girl bound by her four walls."

Chicago Woman to Tour France and Britain Soon

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—Mrs. Louise Leonard Wright, director of the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations, will visit France and Great Britain soon to acquaint women of these countries with the part American women are taking in the war, the office of war information announced tonight. Mrs. Wright is the wife of Dr. Quincy Wright, professor of international law at the University of Chicago.

Household Forum

—By Louise Bargelt—

Mrs. Bert S., Lansing, Mich.—I have learned to give my washable clothes that contain acetate rayon a final rinse in a solution of washing soda; a heaping teaspoonful of washing soda to a quart of lukewarm water. This helps to keep the acetate rayon from fading. I give a garment the same rinse if I intend to store it away for a while.

Kitty G., Chicago—To remove a tight metal screw cap from a glass jar, hold the cap in a flame for a couple of seconds. I have found that this will expand the metal and make removal easy.

Alice H., Traverse City, Mich.—A small, new paint brush is a handy implement when house cleaning time comes. It's easy to get dust out of difficult crannies in my wicker furniture with such a little brush, and it is also good for window sills, shades, draperies, etc.

Thru the Looking Glass

The person troubled with an oily skin can't be too careful about keeping it scrupulously clean. Such skins need thoro cleansing not only morning and night, but at least once or more in the course of the day to keep it free from dirt which, in combination with the natural oil, can lay the foundation for blackheads and more serious complications.

The business woman or school girl whose skin is of this type doesn't always find it easy to accomplish these cleansings, and we'd like to suggest a product that is just right for their needs. It's wonderfully effective, simple to use, and the bottle in which it's contained takes a minimum of space in a locker or desk drawer.

It is a "liquid lather," a cleanser that is not really a soap, but which creates a lather and chases dirt to suit any one's satisfaction. A bland kind of preparation, it's kind to sensitive skins and especially designed to give the oily complexion the sort of treatment it needs.

Originally it was intended to be used with a complexion brush, but since brushes are so hard to get these days and because a middle of the day cleansing generally needs to be done with as few encumbrances as possible, the fingers can be used as a good substitute. Moisten the hands and pour a little of the liquid into the palm and then wash with an upward and outward motion. Don't go at it half heartedly, but really scrub to help stimulate the skin and add to the effectiveness of the cleansing. Rinse well with alternating warm and cold water, and finish with a good splashing of cold.

It's a simple treatment which recommends itself highly to busy persons and is ideal for keeping even an excessively oily skin looking fresh and clear, protected against many of the hazards that beset the way to complexion health and beauty. LOUISE DOOLEY.

Orchestra Does Full Program of U.S. Music

Ballade for orchestra, "Tam O'Shanter" ..... Chadwick
First Essay for Orchestra ..... Barber
Prelude and Allegro, for organ and strings ..... Piston
[First concert performance in Chicago.]
Suite from "The Plough That Broke the Plains" ..... Thomson
[First performance in Chicago.]
First Overture ..... Read
Classic Concerto, for organ and string orchestra ..... Sowerby
"An American in Paris" ..... Gershwin

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG.

Whether it is a compliment to the American composer to segregate him from the rest of musickind as if he had the smallpox or rabies is a subject upon which that usually vocal gentleman probably can express himself more eloquently than a mere reviewer whose future is not at stake. Désiré Defauw's first of two all-American programs with the Chicago Symphony orchestra yesterday afternoon imposed a strain on the professional listener, and left the audience too weak to applaud, even after the rough, ready, and phenomenally loud performance of the most tuneful piece of the afternoon, Gershwin's "An American in Paris," which closed the program.

With what may or may not have been the best of intentions, Mr. Defauw served a menu of some admirable courses that added up to an indigestible meal. Conducting thruout from the scores, altho he has paid the compliment of memorizing to far more dubious music, Mr. Defauw began his American explorations with Chadwick's "Tam O'Shanter," not a new work, since Frederick Stock played it eight times—one of those bulbous, naively literal pieces of program music for which the present conductor frequently has demonstrated his predilection.

Better stuff, and as imaginative as anything the afternoon offered, was Samuel Barber's "First Essay for Orchestra," a modest piece which betrays a strain of native eloquence in its author and the technical means for its expression.

Virgil Thomson's suite from incidental music for a Pare Lorentz movie, "The Plough that Broke the Plains," was just that—postage stamp vignettes of an indigenous color that fell pleasantly on the ear while reading the Sandburgesque program notes. The First Overture of Gardner Read of Evanston and Kansas City perked up the proceedings with some lively music based on southern tunes and cast in a conventional mold, tho some of its better points seemed to be lost in an excessively exuberant performance. The composer was present and at Mr. Defauw's request took a bow from a center box, where he could be seen by possibly one-eighth of the people in the hall.

E. Power Biggs, one of the nation's most facile organists, came on from Boston to play two compositions for the same combination—both Walter Piston and Leo Sowerby apparently being convinced that the string section of an orchestra is about all that can be safely combined with an organ. Both composers also gave classic titles to their pieces, tho surely with tongues in cheeks. Mr. Piston's "Prelude and Allegro" is the more concise of the two, exhibiting an economical if not always persuasives skill. Mr. Sowerby's "Classic Cocerto" occupies three short movement which traverse the customary moods with a personalized brashness that at best was engaging, but left the auditor with the dubious feeling that what he was hearing was not always what the composer intended for him to hear.

Russian Trio Ends Series

The Russian Trio at Kimball hall last night completed the series of four chamber concerts which included two appearances of the Budapest Quartet. Two works comprised the program: Brahms' third and last Trio, in C minor, and Tschaikowsky's long elegiac Trio in memory of Nicholas Rubinstein. Both pieces received admirable interpretations. The Brahms had dignity and strength, with an especially deft scherzo and a warmly glowing slow movement. The Tschaikowsky was played for all its dramatic worth, with some virtuoso contributions from all performers. The variations, however, would have seemed more of a piece with fewer and shorter pauses between them.

ON THE AISLE

By Claudia Cassidy

Strauss' Score, Fresh Voices, and Ralph Herbert Are the Best of "Rosalinda"

Count me on the fence about "Rosalinda." It isn't my show and no "Fledermaus" revival ever will be until it spills the dry champagne of Strauss' bubbling score into an adaptation that rivals the music in glitter, verve, and wit. Yet the New Opera's production now at the Erlanger is far superior to last season's abortive version by the Philadelphia Opera. It has some fresh voices, a handsome Rosalinda in Lorraine Bridges, a delightful curtain and first act setting by Oliver Smith, a well cast but badly directed Adele in Graciela Rivera, and just about the best Eisenstein of my acquaintance in the Viennese baritone, Ralph Herbert. If all of "Rosalinda" measured up to Strauss and Herbert, I would be over that fence in a jiffy.

But can any one tell me what happens to these "American adaptations" of Viennese librettos, and what happens to a director like Felix Brentano when he tackles an American show? I've no idea how good Mr. Brentano is in Vienna, but he is terrible over here. He falls back on all the clinchés known to show business, and he adores the coy. "Rosalinda" is packed with the kind of heavy handed stage business that has spoiled operetta for decades, and if George Balanchine thinks that is a ballet he is giving us, he ought to take another look. All it has is Phyllis Hill, a charming little dancer who resembles Marcy Wescott.

But you all know the disappointments of these Viennese revivals from sad experience, so suppose we talk about the good things, of which Mr. Herbertis by far the best. He has the continental style to skip thru the story without looking foolish, and altho he sings a tenor role, his good baritone is more than adequate. As the philandering husband whose fate it is to pinch maids whose screams are explained by mice, he actually makes Mr. Brentano's direction look plausible.

Miss Bridges can't quite bring that off, but she looks a bit like Rosalind Russell and sings well with a limited but pretty soprano. Miss Rivera is tiny and pert, with a dainty coloratura and no doubt she is too young to know when it is time to stop acting. Mr. Dudley is a tenor wol fwhose yodeling is such that I was reprehensibly pleased when he was hauled off to jail instead of Eisenstein. The company is general isn't much to the eye, but it does well by the ear when it makes a frontal attack on the music.

Jewish Theater at Civic.

"The Glass Menagerie" ends its Civic theater engagement March 24, and the following Friday, March 30, the house will be taken over for a little more than eight weeks by the Chicago Jewish Theater association, which means Harry Zelzer and Charlie Nelson. They will present the Douglas Park theater troupe in four shows, opening with Rumshinsky's musical, "Little Queen." Oscar Ostroff will stage the productions, and Sam Solomon is musical director.

Orchestra Records.

Both the Chicago Symphony orchestra and Victor decline to say what they plan to record, on grounds that competitive organizations might beat them to the draw, but that little bird always flying about suggests these compositions—Prokofieff's "Scythian Suite," Glazounoff's "Stenka Razine," Franck's "Eros and Psyché," and the Gretry-Motti "Cephale and Procris."

"ROSALINDA."

New Opera company's production of Max Reinhardt version of Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus," adapted by Gottfried Reinhardt and John Meehan Jr., with lyrics by Paul Kerby, dances by George Balanchine, settings by Oliver Smith, costumes by Ladislas Czetti. Directed and staged by Felix Brentano and presented by Yolanda Mero-Irion, at the Erlanger Monday evening, March 12, 1945.

Pastel Shades to Rule in Tots' Easter Parade

BY REA SEEGER.

Fashions for the youngsters' Easter parade are out, along with those for the grown-ups. Tiny coats and hats for moppets 1 to 3 years old are unbelievably fancy. There are feminine versions of a sailor coat with embroidered stars on each cuff and brass buttons down the front, but there all resemblance to the nautical blues and brass ceases. For these feminine colors are the pale blue of a spring sky, pale pink, and yellow—all Easter egg colors. The bonnets are visions of cunning chic with face framing brims and are made of the same material as the coat, soft flannels, and woolens.

Big and little sister combinations are also new and very swank. There are striped woolens, monotone wools in pink, blue, yellow, and green, and some stunning tweed mixtures. One model has braid covered edges to the collar, pocket flaps, and cuffs. All are double breasted and fitted in a princess line silhouette. The classic straight line box coats also are shown. Brimmed hats or bonnets come to match the coats, making an ensemble worthy of any Easter rotogravure section. These the feminine coats, flawlessly tailored and detailed.

In the same children's collection are some new springtime cottons and some of the most tempting denim blues ever cut and seamed for the very young generation. These denim outfits boast clever embroidery and contrast, one for a small boy bright with an Indian head and with Indian arrows and headdress. Other models are embroidered with ducklings or chickens. See the blue denim "creepers" for that small son who is determined to see the world via the crawl route.

Here's a Movie with More Corn Than the Whole State of Iowa

By Mae Tinée.

I doubt whether the whole state of Iowa has more corn in it than this number. More like an old fashioned vaudeville show than a movie, the only act missing is a juggler. One trouper tossing Indian clubs thru the air and it would be just like what the local houses used to advertise as "Five acts five!" It has a quartet, a dance team, a comic [?], a couple who play three numbers on a mouth organ [so help me], an acrobat who leaps and somersaults as she sings, and much much more that there is no point in mentioning.

Business Girl Shoppers.

I have been puzzled for some time at the attitude prevalent among salespersons toward business girl shoppers. I am a war worker, but, as far as my observation goes, I am one of many in the same quandary.

For the past several months no matter how courteous I try to be to the clerks in the various stores, I'm treated with increasing lack of respect. Yesterday, while on my lunch hour [which has been shortened to 45 minutes, in which time I am expected to eat and do whatever shopping I find necessary] I stopped at a counter to ask about hosiery. The salesperson literally turned on me with a snarl at the politely phrased question.

We war workers are asked to be on the job every day, work long hours overtime, and, if things disturb us, grin and bear it. Are not salespersons also in the war? Isn't it just as much part of their job to be courteous as it always was? —P. K.

MORTON, SENN TEAMS READY FOR TOURNEY

State Meet Starts Tomorrow.

[OTHER PREP NEWS ON NEXT PAGE.]

Sixteen high school basketball teams, survivors of an original field of 841 which started playoff competition three weeks ago, today start their trek into Champaign, where the state basketball tournament will begin in the University of Illinois' George Huff gymnasium, tomorrow morning.

Harry Leighton.

A new champion will come from these ranks since Taylorville, which last season became the first undefeated team in history to win the title, was ousted in sectional play.

Chicagoland hopes are concentrated on the Morton quintet of Cicero, which twice before won the meet, and Senn High school, whose previous efforts in 32 years have been very much ado about little at all.

Starts Out Against Favorite.

The Morton boosters would like to collect another trophy for the showcase out in Cicero, and have asked Dick Bauman, Roy Roffi, Ferd Nadherny, Bob Shaw, and Bob Jelinek, the starting lineup, what can be done about the matter. Morton, with the largest enrollment of any school in the meet, has a group of rooters who are enthusiastic about the Mustang chances even tho Morton meets Champaign, pre-tournament favorite, as an opening assignment.

The smart talk, as is flowing in from downstate where experts are hot on the chances of Champaign, or possibly Decatur, as the prospective titlist, discounts Morton's chances, and points to the Mustangs 11 point defeat by Champaign during season competition.

Will Travel by Auto.

Morton Coach Jim Vopicka, drawing up the travel schedule yesterday, announced a sufficient number of A cards had been assembled to permit the Mustangs to motor to Champaign. Vopicka has listed departure time as 1:30 p. m. today, and as insurance against tardiness plans to count noses at an informal practice session this morning.

Coach Harry [Cap] Leighton of Senn has remained incommunicado since originally announcing Senn would leave this afternoon, altho the latest messages from the north side school indicate a change in plans. The latest communique has the squad motoring down early tomorrow morning, and quartering at the Urbana Lincoln. The Bulldogs meet Moline tomorrow night in their opener.

While in the course of years the maples of Huff gymnasium have become hallowed to prep basketball fans, Chicago teams have had little to do with creating this sanctity, and the Bulldogs could create an upset by defeating the Maroons.

Moline Veteran Out.

That this is possible is conceded even by Moline Coach George Senneff, who yesterday sat by his Moline telephone and answered a bevy of calls from Chicago. Senneff reported that Bill Fogle, his veteran forward and second highest scorer on the team, definitely would not play. Fogle missed the sectional tournament after an appendectomy, and Senneff said the boy would not make the trip.

After that information, the Senneff conversation followed the script he has used in previous years when he generally has bemoaned the fates and claimed that half the squad was lost, strayed, or stolen. His latest roll call lists Gene Larson and Don Greer, centers both, as among the ailing. Greer is not supposed to make the Champaign trip, either.

Senneff willingly admitted that Jack Wulf, Senn's lanky center, might trouble the Maroons, but conceded that in past performances the Moline five has defeated some tall quintets.

NEW YORK, March 13.—It is said the Cubs may circumvent the home team agreement to complete their exhibition schedule. . . . It has been agreed that exhibition games will not be played unless one of the clubs is at its own training camp. . . . For their scheduled exhibition games with the Reds in Louisville, April 6 and 7, the Cubs may play double headers, one game with the Louisville Colonels. . . . Then, with their uniforms already on, they may as well play the Reds, it is figured. . . . New Yorkers still are marveling at the success of J. Arthur Friedlund, Chicago attorney, in negotiating the sale of the Yankee baseball club to Dan Topping and Del Webb. . . . He made several trips to Larchmont to break down Ed Barrow's objections to the deal. . . . Johnny Quinn, who recently succeeded his father, Bob, as president of the Boston Braves, wants a lighting plant as soon as materials are available. . . . Both Boston parks are sprawling single deck layouts, adapted to the installation of light towers which will not cast shadows from tall stands. . . . New York grouch columnists, who used to refer to the 'newspaper' All-America Football conference, have caught on more speedily than their Chicago journalistic ilk. . . . They have concluded that men who already have plunged hundreds of thousands of dollars into the venture must know where they're going. . . . Billy Roche, 76, oldtime referee, picks his all-time boxing team as follows: Heavyweight, John L. Sullivan; light heavyweight, Bob Fitzsimmons; middleweight, Tommy Ryan; welterweight, Joe Wolcott; lightweight, Jack McAuliffe; featherweight, George Dixon; bantamweight, Jimmy Barry. . . . Northwestern university is fortunate indeed that it has at least three men on its staff—Ted Payseur, Lynn Waldorf, and Dutch Lonborg—who are qualified to step into the athletic directorship vacated by the appointment of Tug Wilson as Big Ten commissioner. All these have been successful coaches and Payseur has had opportunity to demonstrate his executive talents.

While discussing baseball with veterans at New Orleans' La Garde hospital Mel Ott, manager of the Giants, recently told of being fined $50 by the late John McGraw for driving in the winning run in the 10th inning. . . . Ott said he forgot to look to the bench for the signal and McGraw penalized him for not bunting in the winning score. . . . Sgt. Frank Parker writes: "I believe the late Lt. Joe Hunt and I are the only tennis players who have won all three outdoor national titles—the boys, the juniors and the men's singles championships." . . . Marquette university's pre-war ruling against married athletes on its varsity teams has been rescinded. . . . If Lt. Angelo Bertelli, Notre Dame's former forward passing star, is throwing hand grenades on Iwo, the Japs will be routed from their foxholes pronto. . . . Dolph Camilli, who made his reputation as a first baseman, will pitch for Oakland this season. . . . He's the manager, so maybe he actually will assign himself to the mound, a lifetime ambition.

Winners Will Fight Chicago April 4.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 13. — Sixteen amateur boxers, representing an area stretching from Puerto Rico to Lake Ontario, tonight qualified for the finals of the 19th annual Golden Gloves tournament in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

An overflow crowd of 19,000 will see the survivors of tonight's semi-finals battle it out in the Garden for places on the New York squad which will meet Chicago's winners in Chicago Stadium April 4.

The championship round involves sailors, soldiers, and marines, but most of the contestants are civilians awaiting induction into the service. There are a couple of 4-Fs and one discharged veteran. Judged by their showing in the Ridgewood Grove arena the last two nights, the New York squad will be made up of boxers rather than punchers. With two or three exceptions the easterners showed less socking power than Stadium fans saw in the semi-finals of the Chicago tournament last Friday night.

A Special Delivery?

The first boy to qualify for the Garden finals was a New Yorker named William Simon, a postal clerk, who outpointed Andy Pecora of Newark. His opponent in the flyweight title match tomorrow night will be curly haired Francisco Garcia, Puerto Rican southpaw, who floored Vic Eisen, Buffalo Negro, five times but couldn't keep him down.

Puerto Rico scored again in the bantamweight division when Adelfo Calderon whipped an 18 year old high school boy named Bobby Temple from Charlotte, N. C. There was no rationing of effort in their duel, but their wild swinging accentuated the negative and all but eliminated the positive. The other bantamweight qualifier was Sal Puzzo of Newark who gained a decision over Jimmy Binz of Washington.

Third Puerto Rican Makes Grade.

Rafael Reveron, Puerto Rico longshoreman, eliminated one of the tournament's stoutest punchers when he won a decision from John Pembridge of New York's Catholic Youth Organization. Pembridge packs an explosive wallop, but he has to get set to be dangerous and Reveron danced out of harm's way. Meanwhile the islander scored a knockdown in the second round, which was the margin that gave him victory. His rival for the featherweight title tomorrow night will be Nick Poppo of Buffalo, who stopped Marvin Marshall of Washington in the second round.

Elbert Highers, a marine from Cherry Point, N. C., stopped Neil Burkett of Miami in the first round of the opening lightweight contest. He scored three knockdowns before the referee called a halt to the bout. The only man standing between Highers and the 135 pound championship is a rangy Irishman named Ed Murphy of New York who won a furious match from Leon Leblond, a brunette from Washington. Leblond frequently was guilty of holding, a desirable practice on the dance floor but very undignified in a boxing ring.

Roach Wastes No Time.

The most devastating puncher in the tournament tonight was La Vern Roach, another marine from Cherry Point who dropped Woodson Speirs, an infantry man from Camp McKall, N. C., with a right cross and then stopped him with a right to the stomach in 25 seconds of the first round. Roach disposed of his 147 pound opponent last night in 30 seconds, so he has won his way to the welterweight finals with less than a minute of effort. Nat Fleischer, editor of Ring magazine, has designated him as the outstanding amateur boxer of the year. Roach's opponent in the championship round will be Mike Koballo from the Miami Naval Training center who won a decision from Allan Faulkner of Buffalo.

The marines landed again in the finals when Howard Brodt of Cherry Point stopped Al Wankewicz, middleweight from the Jacksonville naval base, in the second round. His opponent tomorrow will be Harold Anspach of Charlotte, N. C.,

WITH CUBS AND WHITE SOX IN HOOSIERLAND

DYKES LOOKS AT WHAT HE HAS AND THINKS OF PAST

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Terre Haute, Ind., March 13.—James Dykes' White Sox, who for the time being are made up of 17 signed athletes, took their second spring drill today but even tho they put life into their work they weren't able to crowd out the idea that there is a shortage of ball players hereabouts.

Even the manager, who has assimilated all sorts of punishment in recent years without finishing, wore a dazed look and endeavored to cheer himself up with yarns about Luke Appling, Taft Wright, Ted Lyons, Johnny Rigney, Thurman Tucker, Don Kolloway, and other former Sox.

Dykes' morale wasn't lifted any by the appearance of Dizzy Trout, the Detroit star pitcher and an inexhaustible conversationalist. Dizzy explained he came out to get an idea what to expect when he pitches against the Sox. After a quick glimpse he calmly but loudly disturbed Dykes with, "I have nothing to worry about."

Orengo Worries Dykes.

If it should be necessary for Dykes to fashion a presentable line-up in 24 hours, he'd hardly know where to start. He has on hand two experienced outfielders in Johnny Dickshot and Oris Hockett, two experienced infielders in LeRoy Schalk and Tony Cuccinello, who reported today, and one passable pitcher in Lee Ross. The others present are either minor league unknowns or war babies from amateur or semi-pro circles. There is going to be some improvement if all the missing members show up, but just how much is questionable.

Dykes candidly admits he prefers not to be reminded that he will have to throw some kind of a line-up together in the near future. He is particularly pained about the situation created around first base by the withdrawal of Hal Trosky. For a while there was consolation that Joe Orengo, taken in trade from the Tigers, could play the position, but the boss now suspects the athlete has decided not to report.

Mule's Muscles Balk.

F.D.R. Insists Again He Is for Baseball

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—President Roosevelt made plain today that he wants to see baseball carry on this season, despite its war time difficulties.

In the strongest words he has used on this question thus far, he told a news conference that he is all in favor of baseball as long as it does not require healthy people who could be doing more useful war work.

A reporter quickly asked if the President thought it possible, under that theory, for the major and minor leagues to operate this year and Mr. Roosevelt asked right back, "Why not?"

He said he would go to see sandlot games himself if necessary and so would most people. He also declared that Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators, was quite right in telling reporters that the President favored night baseball.

HAROLD SABATH, WRESTLER WITH U.S.O. GROUP, DIES

Harold Sabath, 29, professional wrestler who went overseas with a United Service organizations unit, died of injuries March 3 in France, his widow, Adelaide, 1837 W. 21st pl., said yesterday. He formerly was employed in the engineering construction department of the city. Besides his widow, he is survived by a son, Jay, 2, and his mother, Ann.

Sabath was one of a party of seven wrestlers who left Chicago early last month. In charge of the party was Benny Reuben, world middleweight mat champion of more than two decades ago.

Others in the group were George Mack, veteran wrestler, whose most recent connection with the game had been as co-promoter of wrestling shows with Reuben at the Cicero stadium; Gay Young, heavyweight from Minneapolis who had made a few appearances on Rainbo Fronton programs promoted by Fred Kohler; Lester [Kid] Chapman of Texas, Al Williams of Fox Lake, and George Ross.

It was learned that Mrs. Williams had received from her husband a letter dated three days after Sabath's death.

Pete Schuh, who has been wrestling in Chicago for several years, had considered making the trip, but decided against it.

WEATHER LEADS GRIMM TO PICK 2 CAMP TEAMS

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

French Lick, Ind., March 13.—The Cubs for the fourth successive day failed to augment their training squad of an even dozen, but today the dozen enjoyed as fine weather as ever smiled on a Cub squad at beloved Catalina, California paradise of long ago. Manager Charley Grimm was so elated with the continuance of fine weather that he announced the lineups for a camp game Friday.

The playing of the game—wait till we give you the lineups—will be of little significance in the matter of revealing baseball skill. The arrangement, however, is deemed noteworthy as it reflects Grimm's impatience in the matter of getting the absentee regulars signed and on the training premises.

The playing of the game also is designed to keep the early birds happy as the majority of the squad stays away. It is said that daily routine might make some of the Cubs who obeyed the reporting call feel like suckers, now that discipline is out of hand with the bulk of the regular personnel. Even the semblance of a contest will give the faithful some diversion, Grimm believes.

Brush Off All Inquiries.

The failure of even one absentee Cub to put in appearance for four days wasn't all. Vice President James T. Gallagher, sole Cub salary negotiator, still in Chicago where it is presumed he is struggling to untangle matters of different sorts, has sent no word to the camp as to when, if ever, he may expect any additions to his dauntless dozen. Grimm and Traveling Secretary Bob Lewis hourly brush off inquiries as to how many of the absentees are in salary debates, how many are worried about the possibility of having to join the army or navy, how many are just plain tired, and so on.

That the White Sox were able to muster one more player on the first day than the Cubs had on their sixth day here, including the four Cubs who are said to be working out with the Los Angeles Angels at Anaheim, Cal., did not make the Cubs look any better in their straggling. And the fact the Cubs had barely half as many here after six days as their league rivals, the New York Giants, had at their first roll

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS.
Boston, 2; Detroit, 2.

Boston, Mass., March 13 (AP).—Boston's Bruins gained a three point lead over the Chicago Blackhawks in the fight of the two teams for fourth place in the National Hockey league and the final berth in the Stanley Cup play-offs tonight when they played the Detroit Red Wings to a 2 to 2 tie in the Boston Garden. The point Boston gained tonight served to add importance to the game between the Bruins and the Blackhawks in Chicago Stadium Thursday night.

A crowd of 12,000 saw the Bruins, who had lost 19 straight league games to Detroit, permit the Wings to come from behind twice to bring about the final tie score. Flash Hollett, who has been instrumental in beating the Bruins since Boston traded him to Detroit last season, scored both of the Wings' goals tonight.

Boston Starts Scoring.

Both of Hollett's goals were long angle shots and they boosted his season's total to 19 goals, the third time he has reached that figure in his 11 seasons in league play. Hollett has scored 11 times in 16 starts against his former Boston teammates.

Armand Gauderault supplied the first Boston goal after six minutes of play with Paul Gladu's assistance. Four minutes later Hollett forced the first tie by scoring on a 40 foot drive after taking the puck Ted Lindsay batted out of a quarter ice face-off in the Boston zone.

Hollett Ties It Again.

Bill Jennings batted in Boston's second goal, which was set up by Herb Gain midway thru the second period and the Bruins held a 2 to 1 lead until the third minute of the final period when Hollett intercepted a clearing shot and whipped home a 30 foot shot. Lineups:

CHATT CAPTURES CASTING HONORS WITH 99 POINTS

Defeats Jures in Tie Shoot-Off.

BY BOB BECKER.

Howard Chatt, 7308 Crandon av., who holds so many casting titles that an adding machine is needed to keep track of them, last night won first place in THE TRIBUNE'S casting tournament at the International Sportsmen's show in the Coliseum with a score of 99 out of a possible 100. Chatt competed as a member of the Jackson Park Casting club in the event for club contestants only.

Steven Jures, 4905 Olcott av., East Chicago, Ind., placed second by scoring 96 in an exciting tie shoot-off. Both Chatt and Jures hit the floating ring targets to score 98 points in the first round of casting. But in the shoot-off Chatt forged ahead by being just one point away from a perfect score to win over his rival.

S. G. Dennis Is Third.

S. G. Dennis, 4128 Clarendon av., who has been interested in tournament casting for only two years, tied for third in the competition with a score of 97. It was his first appearance in a Tribune tournament. He had to divide his third place rating with Earl H. Garnsey, 6017 S. Paulina st., a veteran of many Chicago casting contests. Garnsey, a member of the Gary Anglers' club, is the Illinois state champion in both the ⅝ and ⅞ ounce events.

He cast in his first Tribune tournament in 1937 and has appeared in every one since that year. Fourth place in the evening's competition was won by George Hess, 5400 Greenwood av., a member of the Jackson Park club, who held the ⅝ ounce championship in 1942. The Scales and Tales club of the Ravenswood Methodist church placed among the top five in the evening's competition when R. F. Lavay, 4445 N. Paulina, a member of that organization, scored 95 to win fifth place.

Club Competition Ends Tonight.

These winners and five others who made scores in last night's competition will cast in the finals for club members at the end of the week. Tonight casters who belong to clubs will conclude their competition. Tomorrow night the service men who like to use 5 foot casting rods will try their skill at hitting the targets. This event starts at 7:30 p. m.

Dog lovers at the sports show yesterday had a treat when Nick Kahler, manager of the show, put his black Labrador retrievers thru their paces before a large crowd. They worked in fine form on land and water, retrieving single and double birds. Two of the dogs that Kahler sent after the live ducks in the pool retrieved them quickly. But when it came to capturing the diving duck, four of the dogs coudn't make the grade. After giving the dogs four minutes to get the elusive duck, the judge blew his whistle, giving the duck the victory.

LOSES LEG BUT NOT HIS SPIRIT

NAZI PRISONER YEAR AGO DRILLS WITH SENATORS!

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—Less than a year ago, Lt. Bert R. Shepard, Clinton, Ind., was a prisoner in Germany. Today, with part of one leg off, he practiced with the Washington Senators.

"This is the thing I dreamed about over there for months," he told a reporter. "Sure, I'm serious about playing ball, and I believe that I can."

Before the war, Shepard, a 5 foot 11, 185 pound southpaw pitcher and first baseman, played in such minor leaguees as the ; Wisconsin State, Evangeline, and California State.

Inspired by Pete Gray.

If Pete Gray, one armed outfielder, can make the big leagues with the St. Louis Browns, Shepard sees no reason why he shouldn't help out during the manpower shortage, whether he plays in the majors or minors.

Shepard, piloting a P-38, was shot down northeast of Berlin, May 21, 1944. The exchange ship Gripsholm brought him home on Feb. 2.

Shepard, manager of the 55th fighter group baseball team in England, was injured on this 34th mission. He still is a patient at Walter Reed hospital here.

"I can still take a good cut at the ball, throw well and when I get a special leg instead of this temporary one, I'll do O. K.," he said.

"If I can't make the majors, I'd like to play on the Pacific coast, where I have a lot of friends.

RED SOX PARTY LEAVES.

Boston, Mass., March 13 (AP).—With Pete Fox, the .315 hitting outfielder as the only player, the Boston Red Sox' advance guard today entrained for the Pleasantville, N. J., spring training camp. The party also included Manager Joe Cronin, Coaches Tom Daly, Hugh Duffy, and Larry Woodall, and Trainer Win Green.

RAY SANDERS SIGNS.

St. Louis, Mo., March 13 (AP).—Ray Sanders, St. Louis Cardinal first baseman, has signed his 1945 contract, President Sam Breadon said today. He is one of six National league players to bat in more than 100 runs last season.

BROWNS FLOCK IN.

Cape Girardeau, Mo., March 13 (AP).—Only a bit of salary dickering is all that stands between the management and a few of the St. Louis Browns' mainstays to put the 1944 American league penant winning team together again.

HAGG, LIDMAN DUE TO ARRIVE IN CHICAGO TODAY

Gunder Hagg, Swedish track star, will arrive in Chicago today to conclude training for his third mile race since his arrival in the United States—the Bankers' mile, feature of the Chicago relays in the Stadium Saturday night.

Hagg, accompanied by his countryman, Haakon Lidman, a hurdler, will be greeted by his fiancee, Miss Dorothy Nortier of Oakland, Cal.

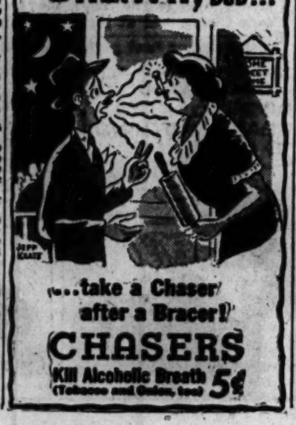
Sports Bribery Bill Makes Headway in Springfield

Springfield, Ill., March 13 (AP).—Legislation making it unlawful to offer or accept bribes to influence results of sports events was recommended favorably today by an Illinois house committee.

Before advancing it for floor consideration, the committee reduced the bill's penalty provisions to a maximum one year jail sentence or $1,000 fine, or both.



Tigers Depart for Camp in Evansville

Detroit, Mich., March 13 (AP).—Manager Steve O'Neill and an advance guard of Detroit Tigers entrained today for Evansville, Ind., where the club will open spring training Thursday.

The group included Trainer Ray Forsyth, Road Secretary Clair J. Berry, Scout A. J. [Wish] Egan, Pitchers Al Benton, Art Houtteman, and Bill Pierce, Catcher Bob Swift, and Infielder Johnny McHale.

Outfielder Harvey [Hub] Walker, property of Minneapolis in the American association, went along also. He'll work out with the Tigers.

Many of the remaining members of a tentative roster of 33 players are expected to converge on the Evansville camp this week-end from their scattered homes. They are due to report by March 20. Only battery men are officially due Thursday.

20 PHILS SIGN CONTRACTS.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 13 (AP).—General Manager Herb Pennock reported 20 Philadelphia Phillies had signed contracts as the club prepared for the opening of spring training tomorrow in Wilmington, Del.

An advance guard of Mervyn Shea, Chuck Klein, and Jimmy Foxx will precede Manager Fred Fitzsimmons.

Pennock announced that the Phils have purchased the Wilmington baseball club of the Interstate league but the Wilmington club will remain in the family since it was owned by Sgt. Bob Carpenter Jr., Phillies president, whose father is principal Phils' stockholder.

The Phils now own four farm clubs. The others are Utica of the Eastern league, Bradford in the Pony league, and Concord in the North Carolina State league.

WEINTRAUB REPORTS.

Lakewood, N. J., March 13 (AP).—Under a warm sun, the New York Giants worked out for two hours and 40 minutes today.

Phil Weintraub, regular first baseman, reported today, and the arrival of Bobby Barthelson boosted the number of pitchers now in camp to 13. Horace Stoneham, president of the club, announced that Cliff Melton, left hand hurler; Billy Jurges, infielder, and Charley Mead, utility outfielder, were the only players who could be called holdouts.

McCARTHY WATCHES YANKS.

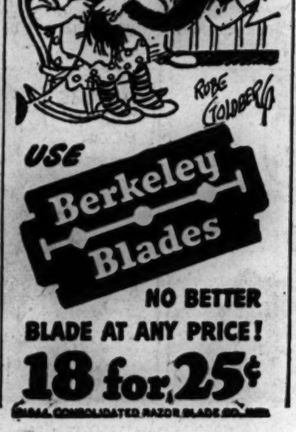
Atlantic City, N. J., March 13 (AP).—Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees arrived at training camp today in time to watch his charges go thru a 90 minute workout. Only 11 players were present.

"I have not heard from any of the other players and I have no idea who will show up," McCarthy said. "Until I see more men on the field I cannot form any opinion on the team's outlook."

Outfielder Hershel Martin and Pitcher Ken Holcombe checked in too late to work out. Outfielder Paul Waner and Pitcher Ernie Bonham are reported to have voiced a preference to condition themselves at home, where the weather is much warmer.

MACK SIGNS CHRISTOPHER.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 13 (AP).—Connie Mack and Russ Christopher reached a contract agreement today, shortly after the Athletics' manager arrived home. The righthander won 14 and lost 14 with the fifth place A's last season.



MARSHALL AND TULEY MEET FOR CITY TITLE TODAY

Marshall and Tuley will meet this afternoon at 3:45 in the Crane Tech gymnasium, Oakley and Jackson blvds. for the City league junior basketball championship.

Both quintets were foes during the regular west section season. Marshall went thru the section undefeated in nine games, while Tuley was beaten twice to finish in second place. One loss was to Crane, 32 to 28, and the other was to Marshall, 47 to 38.

In the preliminary play-off round Marshall trimmed Sullivan, 48 to 33, and Tuley turned back Lake View, 43 to 36. The Commandos received their toughest test in the quarter-final round but triumphed, 53 to 45, over Waller of the North section.

Tuley survived the quarter-final round by nosing out Hyde Park, 34 to 29. Marshall again almost tasted defeat in the semi-finals but managed to stave off a Gage Park rally to win by a 43 to 38 score. Tuley advanced to the championship game by routing Tilden, 56 to 20.

Leading scorer on the Marshall club is Howie [Doc] Doman, who compiled a total of 98 points in nine West section games to finish in fourth place in the individual scoring race. Bernie Stolar and Karl Kuppersmith paced the Tuley quintet during the preliminary race, each with 92 points.

Cubs to Play First Camp Game Friday

Grimm Has Pennant Plans.

In neither 1943 nor 1944 the team enjoyed such a span of gorgeous weather as that which has prevailed on all but one of the six days the fractional squad has been here. In view of this break Grimm has been particularly disappointed at the kicking around of his laudable plan to get a flying start for 1945. He has pennant plans, providing the Chicago office can get the squad assembled within the next week.

Royal Calcutta Club Lives Up to Its Name, G. I. Golfers Find

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

American golf clubs, notably the scores in the Chicago area, have done an outstanding job of supplying golf facilities to service men on furlough or en route to overseas duty. The Chicago District Golf association, thru its war services committee and the United Service Organizations, has arranged as many as 4,000 playing privileges a week for soldiers, sailors, marines, and coast guardsmen.

Service golfers who have been stationed in the British Isles report that many of them have been fortunate enough to play English and Scotch courses famed as the sites of British amateur and open tournaments and the international Ryder cup matches against the United States. Americans have competed in open tournaments in Rome and Casablanca, and golf associations here have forwarded golf clubs and balls to the Pacific rest areas, for men from the battle fronts.

Reports from India.

This summary of overseas golf would seem to cover all playable sectors except India. Comes a letter from Staff Sgt. Pat Gould, assuring the home folks that golfers on leave in that area are not being neglected. Sgt. Gould's letter was prompted by receipt of a Jan. 11 edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, wherein Capt. Horton Smith advocated a uniform national plan of giving playing privileges to service men during and after the war.

"You might be interested," writes Sgt. Gould, "to know of the tremendous job the Royal Calcutta Golf club has done for G. I.'s and British non-coms. It is the only one of several clubs in Calcutta where noncommissioned men can play. Among some of the points about the Royal Calcutta's system are the following:

"1. There are no greens fees.

"2. Clubs are furnished free.

"3. The fee for two caddies for 18 holes is 30 cents, with the fee held up if the caddies lose any balls.

"4. Golf balls are obtained from lend-lease, and one ball is loaned to each player.

"6. A cost-price canteen serves refreshments until 9 p. m.

"7. Fifteen hundred Americans play every month, and the place looks like a G. I. country club any week-day.

"8. Military players use the course every day except Saturday afternoons, Sundays, and holidays.

Two Sets of Clubs, 1,000 Soldiers.

"The shortage of clubs is so acute that there are often 20 or more soldiers waiting for clubs. It is true there are several sets of clubs furnished by the special services division of the United States army, but one camp of more than 1,000 men, which adjoins the golf course, has only two sets, each of five clubs, and no bags. If special service regulations would allow clubs to be left at the Royal Calcutta, the shortage might be partially relieved.

"Most of the G. I.'s who play the Royal course are visiting Calcutta on furlough from the Ledo road and the combat areas of Burma.

"Would appreciate your passing this information along to the P. G. A., the U. S. G. A., and Capt. Horton Smith, for here is a model which can be followed by any service men's golf courtesy system any where."

Haas gave the boys their first calisthenics and in his overzealousness inadvertently strained his aged muscles, making him worthless in a subsequent role as a fly ball hitter. Coach Muddy Ruel finally came to the Mule's aid, so that there would be no break in the athletes chasing of fungoes, always hit too far ahead of them to be caught.

A city park crew still is laboring on the infield with pieces of sod, rollers, etc., but hopes to have the task completed by tomorrow. If so, Dykes will ease the pupils' pains by permitting them to indulge in hitting practice. Despite the hazards of advancing age, Dykes may do a little of it himself. He is beginning to talk about Player Dykes returning as a first baseman, which only goes to prove the extent of the mental strain under which a big league manager operates these days.

PICK FINALISTS IN ST. SABINA MEET TONIGHT

Semi-finals in the St. Sabina Central A. A. U. basketball tournament will be played tonight in the St. Sabina community center with St. Sabina's C. Y. O. team meeting De Paul's frosh in the first contest, and De La Salle High school playing Danly Machines in the second game.

In last night's conclusion of second round contests, the Danly Machines five rallied to defeat the Wood Lawn Rubicons, 45 to 44, after trailing, 14 to 2, at the end of the first period. In the two other contests, De La Salle High school defeated St. Ignatius High school, 44 to 37, and the De Paul frosh defeated Mount Carmel High, 38 to 32.

SEC THREATENS COURT MOVE TO ENFORCE ORDER

Asks Prompt Action by United Light.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 13 (AP).—The securities and exchange commission today advised the United Light and Railways company and its subsidiary, American Light & Traction company, to comply "promptly" with a 1941 integration order or face possible court enforcement action.

In a statement of tentative views and conclusions on the system's pending application to dissolve American Light and construct a 70 million dollar gas pipe line, the SEC said there should be "no further delay on the part of Railways in complying with the order of Aug. 5, 1941, requiring divestment of all interests" in subsidiaries of American Light and of Detroit Edison company common stock, "nor on the part of American Light in complying with these provisions requiring the disposition of its interest" in Detroit Edison and American Coal company, San Antonio, Tex.

Cannot Be in Same System.

The SEC's tentative conclusion said the Milwaukee Gas Light company, Madison Gas and Electric company, Milwaukee Solvay Coke company, American Coal, and Consolidated Building company, Milwaukee, could not remain in the same holding company with Michigan Consolidated Gas company. The latter serves gas to Detroit, Grand Rapids, Muskegon, Ann Arbor, and other Michigan communities.

In addition, the SEC tentatively ruled that American Light "serves no useful purpose" and must be liquidated. It said the outstanding $25 par value preferred stock of American Light "may be retired only from presently available resources" rather than thru the $4,750,000 bank loan suggested by the company.

"American Light may not itself remain in existence to construct and own a new pipe line; nor may a pipe line be jointly owned by Milwaukee Gas, Madison Gas, and Michigan Consolidated, even if one should ultimately be constructed to serve such companies," the commission said.

Fixes Terms for Pipe Line.

"If a pipe line is to be built exclusively to supply Michigan Consolidated's natural gas requirements, it may be owned by Michigan Consolidated or by a subsidiary of that company, or by a new company whose stock would be distributed along with other portfolio securities of American Light so that the liquidation would not be delayed," the tentative conclusions continued.

The commission also said the 20.2 per cent of Detroit Edison's common stock owned by American Light could not be retained by it or any subsidiary "for future use in connection with any pipe line construction."

"If it appears that the pipe line construction is sufficiently imminent to warrant setting aside assets of the American Light system to provide for it at this time," the statement said, "American Light may file appropriate applications providing for the donation of cash to Michigan Consolidated or a new pipe line company."

Planned Kansas to Detroit Line.

American Light originally proposed to build the line from the Hugoton fields in Kansas and Oklahoma to serve Detroit, Milwaukee, Madison, and communities in Illinois and Iowa.

Michigan Consolidated, Madison Gas, and Milwaukee Gas were to have held the stocks of the new company which American Light proposed to form to build and operate the line.

The commission granted the system 15 days in which to file a counter-statement of views, including "a specification of those matters upon which it is deemed necessary to adduce additional evidence."

SYNTHETIC TIRES PROVED RUGGED IN SEVERE TEST

A 500 mile test at an average speed of more than 100 miles an hour has demonstrated the ruggedness of synthetic tires for passenger automobiles, L. R. Jackson, executive vice president of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, reported yesterday. The test was made by Wilbur Shaw, three time winner of the Indianapolis auto race, at the Indianapolis track under the supervision of the American Automobile association.

Despite speed as high as 135 miles an hour and 90 miles per hour at the turn not a skid or blowout occurred during the 500 mile test which was equivalent of 50,000 miles of ordinary driving.

Bondholders Object to City Traction Plan

While Mayor Kelly and a corps of assistants were in Springfield yesterday explaining the proposed metropolitan traction district to a senate committee, several objections were filed in the federal District court to the city's plan to purchase the surface and elevated lines and unify them under muncipal ownership.

The purchase offer of 87 million dollars [75 million to the surface interests and the rest to the L] was made under the Illinois municipal ownership act. The intention is for the city, if the metropolitan district is created by the legislature, to sell the properties thus acquired to the district.

Ask Full Bond Payment.

First mortgage bondholders of the surface lines said they were receptive to the city offer, but insisted they were entitled to 100 cents on the dollar for their 72 million holdings. They asked elimination of an alternative suggested payment of 95 cents. They said the offer, predicated on the city's ability to borrow the purchase funds, is the smallest ever made for the traction facilities. The City National Bank and Trust company, trustee for the adjustment income 4 per cent bonds, objected to the provision in the plan that these bonds had no value.

The securities and exchange commission, acting as adviser to the court, reported the senior bonds should be fully paid, but that it was not ready to say whether the offer to the two companies was fair.

Junior surface lines security holders and the owners of the elevated bonds already have protested that the amounts offered them are too small. The surface lines juniors have insisted the first mortgage bonds should receive only 95 cents on the dollar.

Urge Merger Be Kept Alive.

All objectors urged that the trustees' plan, which would unify the companies under private ownership, be kept alive as an alternative to city ownership.

The Illinois commerce commission extended for six months its order directing full transfer privileges among the surface and L lines and the Chicago Motor Coach company. This order has been in effect since Oct. 1, 1943, and the number of intercompany transfers has grown steadily. John D. Biggs, commission chairman, said experience had shown the expanded transfer plan had benefitted both the public and the companies.

U. S. HOLDS KEY TO ADVANCES IN BUSINESS: LYON

'Chicago Set to Go, if Permitted.'

Chicago will expand its production and employment after the war above previous peace time levels if the federal government can "generate the conditions which will permit national and international business expansion," Leverett S. Lyon, chief executive officer of the Chicago Association of Commerce, said yesterday.

Speaking at a Rotary club luncheon in Hotel Sherman, which Thomas B. Freeman, president of the association, also addressed, Lyon said reconversion would be easier for Chicago than for most cities.

Changes Less Revolutionary.

Chicago will have many fundamental advantages, he said, because changes brought on by the war were not as revolutionary as elsewhere, especially in coastal areas.

"The kinds of industry here are fundamental to production in either war or peace," Lyon said. "Chicago's steel mills, its forge shops and foundries, machinery manufacturers, chemical plants, oil refineries, and food industry are all necessary.

"This basic industrial pattern which existed before the war has been rounded out by the addition of aluminum rolling mill capacity, aviation engine factories, an airplane plant, and several plants making other parts for transportation equipment.

More Helpful Than Upset.

"Chicago's manufacturing capacity for electronic equipment, for which an exceptionally bright future is predicted, has been greatly increased. In general the war time changes have expanded and integrated Chicago's industrial capacity much more than they have disturbed it."

Freeman said that an awakened civic conscience augurs well for the future of Chicago in advances in schools, transportation, street and alley maintenance, smoke abatement, wholesome and adequate community centers, and other endeavors.

CHICAGO TOPS SWPC LIST

The Chicago region of the Smaller War Plants corporation led the other 13 regions in dollar volume of contracts awarded thru it during December and January and had the second largest monthly total of its career in February, Fred M. Echoff, regional director, said yesterday.

Awards in the region last month were $52,645,454, compared with a peak of approximately 58 million in the longer month of January. The December-January compilation showed placement of 571 prime contracts valued at $78,605,326 with smaller plants in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, and Wisconsin.

In a report to congress on nationwide operation of SWPC, Chairman Maury Maverick said prime contracts obtained for smaller plants totaled $432,155,000 during December and January, an increase of 139 millions or 47 per cent from the preceding two months. Awards since the program began in September, 1942, reached 2 billion 100 million last Dec. 31.

Continental Gin company registered with the securities and exchange commission 37,303 shares of 4½ per cent $100 par cumulative preferred stock which would be offered in exchange for 6 per cent preferred stock on a share for share basis.

Wheat Prices Rise on Added Credit to CCC

Reason for the large purchase of wheat was the passage late Monday of a bill extending the life of the Commodity Credit corporation two years and increasing its borrowing power 2 billion dollars. This was construed by grain traders as a guarantee wheat prices will remain high for many months.

May and July Wheat at Peaks.

May and July wheat advanced to new seasonal highs. July gained 2⅜ cents a bushel to close at the top. Other deliveries were ¾ to 1⅜ higher. Corn gained ¼ to ¾ and oats ½ to ¾. Rye was active and advanced ⅝ to 1⅜ despite substantial profit cashing. Barley was unchanged.

The upturn in wheat was aided by a request for bids by the army on an estimated 2¾ million sacks of flour, the equivalent of more than 6 million bushels of wheat. The flour is for April shipment and presumably is for relief purposes.

Cash Grains at Ceilings.

Cash wheat, corn, and oats held at ceiling prices on leading markets. Altho the office of defense transportation reported more box cars were being returned from the east, the agency warned that the scarcity would remain critical for some time. Demand for cars recently was estimated to average 15,000 cars a day above supply.

Seeding of grains has started in dry districts of the southwest and continued favorable weather will permit sowing of oats in Nebraska next week.

STOCKS REDUCE EARLY DECLINES AND END UNEVEN

New York, March 13 (AP).—Stocks generally wilted early in today's market, but late buying developed for many leaders and closing prices were uneven. Transfers totaled 760,000 shares, smallest for a full session since Nov. 27.

Another batch of good earnings reports and dividends, combined with the plentiful supply of idle money looking for an outlet, revived buying, some of which also was based on belief the list had completed a technical correction. Reconversion doubts were emphasized, however, by the allied push in Germany.

BOND MARKET MIXED.

New York, March 13 (AP).—The bond market fell back into a narrow and mixed range today after an early unsuccessful rallying attempt. Small gains and losses were about evenly divided.

CHICAGO PRICES SLIDE.

Prices generally fell and most volume leaders had setbacks yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Trade again was dull, totaling 36,000 shares. Active stocks declining included Walgreen, down 1; Peabody Coal, down ¼, and Commonwealth Edison, down ⅛.

SENATORS ASK SHIFT IN SURPLUS DISPOSAL TO AID SMALL FIRMS

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—A senate small business subcommittee today urged abandoning the policy of selling government held surplus consumers goods on an "as is, where is" basis.

The report, submitted by Chairman Stewart [D., Tenn.], said this practice, first used by the treasury department, had worked to the detriment of small business men and to the advantage of speculators.

The new surplus property disposal board has general charge of surplus sales, but the treasury sold a large quantity last year under executive order. The senate group looked into the treasury's operations as a guide for future disposal policies.

To facilitate the disposal of goods in short supply, the committee recommended sale of goods in lots small enough for small business men to handle, widespread advertising of sales, broader use of samples, delivery of goods as advertised, refunds to unsatisfied purchasers, extension of normal trade credit, and "establishment of a reasonably uniform pricing method with the use of fixed prices adjusted to the various distributive levels in many instances."

OWENS-ILLINOIS GLASS.

Please inform me regarding earnings and dividends of Owens-Illinois Glass company and its post-war outlook.—N. R.

Profits of this large glass container manufacturer, which increased during the preceding three years, decreased in 1944 because of larger production costs. Net income per share on the 2,661,204 shares was $3.06, compared with $3.56 in 1943, $3.46 in 1942, $3.40 in 1941, $2.71 in 1940, and $3.17 in 1939.

Common dividends have been paid each year since the company's incorporation in 1907. Since 1939 the regular rate has been $2 a year, supplemented by an extra payment of 50 cents in 1941.

Sales, royalties, and other income have expanded during the war, reaching a peak of $174,584,000 last year, compared with $82,025,000 in 1939. Under peace time conditions demand may decrease and competition from metal containers is expected to become more aggressive.

A problematical influence on the longer term outlook for the glass container industry as a whole was created by the Supreme court's decision last January requiring owners of glass making machinery patents to license them to any one at reasonable royalties, without restrictions on price or production.

Among the company's interests besides production of bottles and jars is the manufacture of tumblers and stemware, glass structural blocks, and insulators. Owens-Corning Fiberglas corporation is an affiliate.

C. F. CUNNINGHAM MADE CHAIRMAN OF OLIVER CORP.

C. Frederick Cunningham, chairman of the executive committee of Oliver corporation, yesterday was elected chairman of the board at the stockholders' annual meeting. He succeeds Cal Sivright, who resigned because of ill health. The board was reduced to 13 members from 14.

Cunningham said that altho sales are larger than a year ago, earnings are lower because of increased operating costs. Future operations are difficult to predict, he said, but sales to normal markets are slightly larger and those on war contracts smaller.

Directors elected A. King McCord to the executive committee, increasing its membership from six to seven. Cunningham was reelected chairman. Alva W. Phelps will serve as president and chief executive officer of Oliver under a change in by-laws made last December.

MINE OPERATORS TO REJECT 2 OF LEWIS' DEMANDS

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—Bituminous coal operators plainly indicated tonight they intend never to agree to John L. Lewis' 60 million dollar royalty demand or to elimination of the north-south wage differential.

The coal producers, whose contract with Lewis' United Mine Workers expires March 31, recessed the contract negotiations with Lewis to figure out how far they would go on his 18 demands for a new contract.

Their stand on the other demands remained a matter of speculation, but their rejection of the royalty and geographical differential items was regarded as certain after two days of consultation. Answers to the other 16 demands are to be given to Lewis tomorrow when the negotiations will resume.

Tax Cuts Income, SEC Study Shows.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 14 (AP).—Sales of manufacturing corporations increased from $55,287,089,000 in 1942 to $70,630,752,000 in 1943, but as a result of higher income taxes net income dropped from 4.8 to 4 per cent of sales.

This was shown today in a securities and exchange commission study of profits and operations of 1,120 manufacturing and 413 nonmanufacturing companies. Included also were details of profits within the two year period reported by 280 companies.

The 1,090 manufacturing companies reporting for 1942 realized a profit of $7,048,585,000 before income taxes compared with $2,630,439,000 after taxes. The 1,082 companies reporting in 1943 had profit of $8,512,695,000 before taxes compared with $2,798,130,000 after taxes.

611 Make Own Deductions.

Figures on the effects of renegotiations showed that 611 companies made voluntary deductions of $226,362,000 on $33,926,243,000 net sales in 1942. Gross refunds as a result of renegotiation after deduction of voluntary funds were $577,506,000.

Of the 611 companies, 241 with net sales of $9,927,489,000 and net profit after taxes of $473,264,000 submitted renegotiation figures, but were not required to make refunds.

Of the 19 groups contained in the study, the 37 oil refining companies reported the largest net sales which were $6,436,113,000 in 1943. Net profit after income taxes was $405,609,000, or 7.6 per cent of sales, in 1942 compared with $505,511,000, or 7.9 per cent, in 1943.

WARNS PLASTICS MUST FACE TEST OF COMPETITION

Consumers should not look forward to an extensive use of plastics until they have been proved in actual use as superior to concrete, steel, wood, and glass, Vernon S. Peterson, consultant of the extension division of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., said last night.

"You hear people talking these days about plastic houses, automobiles, refrigerators, vacuum sweepers, and dozens of other things which are expected in the world of tomorrow," he told the Society of Automotive Engineers at a dinner in the Knickerbocker hotel.

"Plastics have yet to stand the test of competition with established materials. They have enjoyed remarkable growth and development because they have been valuable as war time substitutes and because they were novelties, but it is too early to sell concrete, wood, glass, and steel down the river."

Oklahoma City Store Purchased by Spiegel

Modie J. Spiegel Jr., president of Spiegel, Inc., yesterday reported purchase of Harbour-Longmire company, Oklahoma City home furnishings store. Founded in 1897, the company occupies a 10 story building in downtown Oklahoma City. The purchase is part of Spiegel's plan to operate five retail store chains.

Urge Balance in Rich Routes for Air Lines

Des Moines, Ia., March 13 (AP).—Carleton Putnam of Memphis, Tenn., president of Chicago and Southern Air Lines, today called for a "sound, competitive, well balanced" air transportation system by allocation of "rich routes" to air lines not having what he termed the advantage of operating long routes. He defined a "rich route" as one having a large city at each end.

Appearing before a civil aeronautics board hearing on applications of 27 lines for new or extended routes, Putnam testified in behalf of the C. & S. request for "certain routes" between Chicago and Minneapolis-St. Paul.

He contended the number of long routes between major cities was insufficient for all air lines. If his company, which operates south from Detroit and Chicago, were granted a Chicago-Minneapolis route, Putnam said it could compete with the "big four."

Adds One to "Big Four."

The "big four" were identified as United, Transcontinental and Western, American, and Eastern. References at time to the "big five" also included Northwest Air Lines.

Under cross-examination by W. Glen Harlan of Eastern, Putnam admitted the big four had many routes with small terminals, but they also had "both long routes and rich routes."

Seth Richardson, counsel for Northwest, brought out that Chicago and Southern had Chicago, Detroit, New Orleans, and Houston as excellent terminals.

Its proposed routes between Chicago and the Twin Cities would be [1] thru Rockford, Ill., Dubuque, Ia., and Rochester, Minn., and [2] thru Milwaukee, Madison, and Rochester.

Hedges on Prediction.

Charles A. Rheinstrom, vice president in charge of traffic of American estimated his line would average 10 passengers per flight between Milwaukee and Chicago if it had such a line, but later sidestepped repeating that assertion.

American has applied to extend its Fort Worth-Chicago route to Milwaukee and to expand its Washington-Chicago line to Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The extent to which air service will develop in any community after the war will depend on the type of service offered and the type of selling done there, Rheinstrom said, when asked by Harlan of Chicago-Detroit traffic possibilities.

The proposal to extend American's Fort Worth-Chicago line would parallel a Northwest Airlines route from Chicago to Milwaukee. Reinstrom said American believed the service proposed was more than justified by potential air traffic. He also said traffic between the Twin Cities and Rochester should warrant two carriers, and added some larger cities could use three carriers.

BRITAIN PLANS; U. S. SPLIT

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—Great Britain's disclosure of plans for world routes in civil aviation after the war came as United States policy was in sharp dispute among senators. The main issue was whether a single American flight company should operate internationally as a "chosen instrument" or a zone arrangement should be adopted with regulated competition.

Also argued was whether interim aviation agreements which have been accepted by the state department without prior approval by congress should be delayed. Some Republicans held they ought to be held up pending senate action on a permanent aviation treaty.

No civil aeronautics board spokesman would comment on Britain's plan for turning over empire aviation development to three large companies, each with a big slice of the world. A Pan American Airways spokesman said his globe girdling company regarded this as a policy matter for congress.

EASTMAN SETS PROFIT RECORD ON WAR VOLUME

Photography Gains New Importance.

Net earnings of Eastman Kodak company last year rose to an all-time record, emphasizing the importance of photography in war, F. W. Lovejoy, chairman, and T. J. Hargrave, president, yesterday reported to stockholders.

F. W. Lovejoy.

"Practically every tactical action has been preceded and concluded by photographic information and records," they said. "The company and its associated companies have been the principal source of photographic supplies for all the allied forces."

Eastman also supplied the military forces with a wide variety and substantial amount of fire control, optical, and photographic apparatus, and other types of high precision instruments, they said.

"Rationing" Is Broadened.

Government requirements for sensitized films and paper increased last year, making it necessary to "ration these items to the civilian trade beginning last November. Amateur roll film had been so limited since October, 1942.

Consolidated net profit in the 53 weeks ended Dec. 30 was $23,031,310, or $9.15 a share, compared with $22,270,403, or $8.85 a share, in the 52 week preceding year. Profit in both periods excluded results of wholly owned subsidiaries outside the western hemisphere. Taxes last year totaled $58,699,286, an increase of $6,931,895.

Including fees received under government contracts but after renegotiation provisions, consolidated sales amounted to $303,672,763, against $269,044,394 in 1943.

Special Credit Lifts Profit.

Net income from the sleeping car operations of Pullman company last year climbed to $10,720,628, nearly double 1943 profit of $5,553,085, the Pullman, Inc., subsidiary reported. Net earnings last year, however, included a $2,743,910 credit for 1942 deferred maintenance reserve.

Gross revenues rose to $141,287,863 from $120,529,032. Tax provisions amounted to $16,608,992, against $16,695,432. December net income of $4,037,891, including the credit, compared with a year ago net loss of $174,949.

City Ice and Fuel company reported record sales of $32,208,970 last year, an increase of $6,248,812 from 1943 volume. Net earnings were $2,941,549, or $2.06 a share, against $2,842,898, or $1.81 a share.

COURT ORDERS MATHER TOWER AUCTION APRIL 6

The 42 story Mather Tower, 75 E. Wacker dr., will be "sold in open court" at 10 a. m. April 6, Circuit Judge Miner announced yesterday.

Last December Judge Miner signed a decree ordering Chicago Title and Trust company, Frank Watkins, and J. Mather Watkins, trustees of the Alonzo Mather Aged Ladies' home, to seek the best bids obtainable on the tower and submit them to the court within 60 days. No offers were received, the trustees reported, and the judge ordered the property sold at auction in his court.

If a satisfactory bid is received proceeds will be used as part of an endowment for the home which will be built when conditions permit. Its site has not been selected. The trustees now have about 6 million dollars left by Mather to establish the home, it was said.

REJECT PROTEST AGAINST SPEECH BY GERALD SMITH

Union Votes to Let Him Talk in Its Hall.

The plasterers' union, which became a target of protests when it rented its Temple hall, 330 S. Marshfield av., for an address tomorrow night by Gerald L. K. Smith, organizer and director of the America First party [not connected with the now disbanded America First committee], decided last night to stick by its decision and allow Smith to speak. In a series of resolutions, adopted by the union's executive committee after submission to the membership, the union said that any other course would be a violation of the constitutional freedoms of speech and assembly.

The resolutions provide for a committee of six, three union men and three clergymen—Roman Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish—to sit on the platform with Smith, with power to stop the meeting if anything offensive to racial or religious groups is said. Smith suggested this committee.

Ordered Open to Press.

The meeting also was ordered open to the press, with a public stenographer assigned to take down his remarks for publication and distribution to the union's 300 members overseas. This is intended as an exhibit of the union's stand for constitutional freedom and to allow those members to judge for themselves the union's action.

Some of the protests, which poured in by telephone, telegram, and letter, warned that Smith's appearance "may cause bloodshed" and condemned him as a "disseminator of racial and religious hatred." Most of these followed a familiar pattern. One protester even was careless enough to mail in a mimeographed form on which two messages condemning Smith were outlined with instructions for the writer to take his pick. Thomas Dowling, Plasterers' union secretary, said he suspected this form was circulated by some radical organization.

Majorities Favor Free Speech.

Persons who said they were violently opposed to Smith but were alarmed at the threat to freedom of speech which would result from barring him, were in the majority, Dowling said. He added they seemed more sincere. One man offered a guard of "30 men with stilson wrenches" to see that Smith was guaranteed his rights.

The Chicago Civil Liberties committee, at a meeting of its board of directors in Hotel Sherman, answered Smith's challenge to their stand on free speech and free assembly by taking a "hands off" course. Ira Latimer, executive secretary, dispatched a telegram to Smith saying that "the decision of the Plasterers' union to rent or not to rent Temple hall to you or any one else is both legally and morally a private matter."

Charles Liebman and John B. Foley, former members of the board, were excluded from the meeting when the board went into executive session before the telegram was drafted. Liebman said he did not want to discuss the matter but believed the civil liberties committee "ought to deplore" attempts to keep Smith from using Temple hall instead of taking a neutral stand.

SEEK RELATIVES OF DEAD MAN.

Police last night sought relatives of Kenneth Bennett, 60, address unknown, who was found dead in a hallway at 205 S. Halsted st. The body was taken to 912 Madison st.

MOVIE COLONY'S 'BIG NAMES' ACT TO END STRIKE

Hollywood, Cal., March 13 (AP).—Big names in Hollywood acted today to bring an end to the movie industry strike which entered its second day with both strikers and studios claiming gains.

Noted representatives of three groups—screen writers, directors, and actors' guilds—affiliated with neither side in the union jurisdictional dispute, will meet later today in an effort to seek a truce.

Today the studios claimed they had stepped up production of pictures to 28 sets, as compared with eight yesterday.

15,000 Now Are Idle.

Herbert Sorrell, spokesman for the strikers, said more had joined the walkout today and that "not a wheel will be turning in the studios by the end of the week." An estimated 15,000 were idle today.

Tonight an additional 2,600 members of the AFL carpenters local, nonmembers of the studio union's conference, voted to support the walkout and volunteered for picket duty.

The joint guild committee's statement was that it hoped "to bring about an interim agreement until the issues can be settled formally by the national labor relations board."

The committee included President George Murphy, Alan Hale, and Dorothy Tree of the actors' guild; President John Cromwell, Delmar Daves, and Lewis Milestone of the directors, and Hugh Butler, Ring Lardner Jr., William Pomerance, and Oliver H. P. Garrett of the writers.

The conference of studio unions called the walkout yesterday. The rival international alliance of theatrical stage employes and the conference seek recognition as the bargaining agent for 70 odd set decorators. It was this rivalry which precipitated the strike.

Pickets at Gates.

Pickets from the nine unions comprising the conference of studio groups remained at all major studio gates, but in contrast to yesterday's complete shutdown of half of Hollywood's big plants, managements said today pictures were in production on every lot.

Union men quickly pointed out that when use of present sets is finished, no more will be built because of the walkout of the designers and decorators.

Prospects for an early settlement were none too bright, with all factions apparently refusing to back down. And there were indications that the contest between the studio conference unions and the IATSE might grow more bitter.
